

Chapter 90-1

Lumi, as the famous "social butterfly"¹ of Minghui Jewelry's Design Department, often exchanged gossip with people.

When Xu Qingzhu saw this message and this photo, her first reaction was: Lumi, shut up!

So she called Lumi. "Hello, Lumi, where are you?"

Lumi ducked into a corner, covering her mouth with her hand as she spoke into the phone: "Director, I-I-I... I didn't see it on purpose."

Xu Qingzhu: "...I know."

"I'm asking where you are?" Xu Qingzhu asked.

Lumi answered: "At 'Four Seasons'."

That restaurant name was unique enough.

Xu Qingzhu was only silent for one second before Lumi started spilling everything like beans pouring out of a bamboo tube²: "Director, I came to a classmate reunion tonight, and I just happened to want to use the restroom. Then when I turned the corner, I saw... them... aish!"

Lumi didn't even know how to say it, so she could only come out with something bold: "There are thousands upon thousands of women in the world—if one treats you badly, swap her out every day. Director, you're so outstanding, are you afraid you can't find someone else?"

Xu Qingzhu: "..."

This wasn't even about finding someone else or not.

Xu Qingzhu helplessly put her hand to her forehead and instructed her: "Delete that photo. Don't talk about this at the company. I don't want my private matters to become gossip fodder for my colleagues."

Lumi was stunned, then immediately said: "Director, what kind of person do you take me for? I can babble nonsense about ordinary gossip, but I would never be careless about something like this, okay? I definitely won't tell anyone. I deleted it after sending it to you. But..."

Lumi paused, then said in a gloomy tone: "Director, are you coming to catch this pair of cheating women?"

Xu Qingzhu: "...No."

Lumi: "???"

She'd heard that wealthy families often had marriages of convenience³. Could it be that the director and her wife were also...

Lumi suddenly felt like she might have been meddling in other people's business.

But she couldn't help it. She'd had the heart of a chivalrous heroine since childhood, always drawing her sword to help when she saw injustice. Having witnessed the director's wife cheating right before her eyes, could she possibly not tell the director?

Of course not!

Lumi would suffer the condemnation of her conscience for it, so she risked getting fired to send that message to Xu Qingzhu.

Of course, the main reason was that the director was usually very good to them.

Although she seemed cold and aloof, the things she did were very warm.

Lumi had been won over by her completely.

"I saw it with my own eyes!" Lumi said excitedly: "The two of them were embracing!"

"And now?" Xu Qingzhu asked again.

Lumi peeked out again, only to meet eyes directly with Gu Yixue who was walking toward her.

Lumi: "..."

Damn, so beautiful!

Gu Yixue's waist and lower abdomen were exposed. The tank top she wore was very short—remove the two straps and it would be almost like a tube top. Such a seemingly provocative piece of clothing, when worn by Gu Yixue, made her look graceful and elegant, impossible to look away from. You didn't even feel she was being seductive or deliberately enticing.

You could only purely exclaim in admiration: Beautiful.

Beautiful to the degree of meeting the standard of an earthly enchantress.

Gu Yixue slightly raised her eyes to look at her, then carelessly swept a glance over her as she passed by. Lumi felt like all three of her souls and seven spirits⁴ had been stolen away.

It wasn't until Xu Qingzhu called out twice on the other end of the phone: "Lumi?"

Only then did Lumi snap back to her senses. Clutching her heart that was about to leap out of her chest, she complained to Xu Qingzhu: "Wuwuwu! Director! Why aren't you more vigilant!"

"Vigilant?"⁵ Xu Qingzhu's ear went blank for a second. "What vigilance?"

Lumi: "..."

"Director! Please be more careful!"⁵ Lumi said, exasperated at her failure to meet expectations: "That woman is a little vixen! She's too good at seducing people. I don't think your wife cheated on purpose—it's purely because the little vixen outside is too alluring. Director, we're not bad-looking either. With just a little dressing up, we could crush her!"

Xu Qingzhu: "..."

She sat at home listening to Lumi give her terrible ideas, putting the phone on speaker, while the screen displayed the high-definition photo Lumi had sent her.

In the photo, Liang Shi still had her gentleman's hand⁶—this had always been her habit.

And the other woman had fallen toward her. From a distance, it did look like an embrace, but when you zoomed in, you would discover that Liang Shi had simply reached out to steady her. Although the hand supporting her had landed on her arm, she hadn't gripped back.

After Lumi had talked until her mouth was dry, she finally remembered to ask Xu Qingzhu: "Director, did you hear me?"

Xu Qingzhu: "Got it."

Her tone was lazy. Then she said to Lumi: "Lumi, zoom in on that picture and take another look."

Lumi was startled. "I already deleted it!"

Xu Qingzhu: "..."

She hadn't realized before that Lumi was this reliable.

But Xu Qingzhu still explained her analysis to her, and said with absolute certainty: "Liang Shi couldn't possibly cheat."

Lumi: "...Why?"

Xu Qingzhu smiled, her cool and clear voice sounding particularly confident over the phone: "Am I not pretty and talented enough?"

Lumi: "..."

My respects!

Footnotes:

¹ Social butterfly (社牛): Short for "社交牛逼症" (social prowess syndrome), internet slang for someone who is extremely outgoing and has no social anxiety, able to talk to anyone about anything.

² Beans pouring out of a bamboo tube (竹筒倒豆子): A Chinese idiom meaning to speak rapidly and tell everything without holding back, like beans spilling out all at once when you tip over a bamboo container.

⁴ Three souls and seven spirits (三魂七魄): In traditional Chinese belief, humans have three spiritual souls (魂) and seven physical spirits (魄). Saying they were "stolen away" is a dramatic way of expressing being completely captivated or entranced by someone's beauty.

⁶ Gentleman's hand (紳士手): A term referring to the practice of keeping one's hands in a respectful, non-inappropriate position when in close physical proximity to someone, typically hovering near but not actually touching intimate areas—a sign of respectful behavior.

//

After parting with Gu Yixue, Liang Shi held the lighter she had given her and idly clicked it a few times.

A cluster of faint blue flames lit up, and a light smell of lighter fluid permeated the air.

"You're a grown adult and still playing with fire." Zhao Ying had just come out for some fresh air and smiled when she saw her actions.

Liang Shi put away the lighter. "Just playing around."

"Do you smoke?" Zhao Ying asked.

Liang Shi shook her head: "No."

"Then why are you carrying a lighter around?"

"I just ran into someone." Liang Shi said: "That person gave it to me."

Zhao Ying raised an eyebrow and smiled: "Your social circle is quite wide—you can even run into acquaintances here."

"It's a director." Liang Shi thought for a moment and described the person's features, then asked Zhao Ying, "Who is she?"

"You don't know her name?" Zhao Ying was puzzled.

Liang Shi said: "She told me one, but I searched online before and couldn't find anything, so I suspect it's a fake name."

Zhao Ying turned and asked a staff member who happened to be coming out: "Besides us, which other production is having a gathering here today?"

The staff member was a bit dazed from drinking, paused for a moment, then answered: "The 'Blind Eyes' production—Director Guila's ten-episode short series."

"Guila?" Zhao Ying said the name, frowned and repeated it, then suddenly understood. "You mean Quella?"

The staff member smiled embarrassedly: "Yes, that's the name."

Guila was the Chinese transliteration of this director's name, while her stage name was Quella.

Zhao Ying was surprised: "You actually know her."

"I happened to run into her last time and lent her a light." Liang Shi said.

Zhao Ying nodded and patted her shoulder: "You should stay in touch with her more. This director is really something."

"Hm?" Liang Shi was confused.

But Zhao Ying had already turned and walked away, leaving a reminder: "Search her up and you'll know."

This time Liang Shi searched for Quella, and results came up quickly.

The introduction following this name read: International emerging director, Bosca Best New Director, W.T Best Screenwriter. Representative works include "The Messenger," "The Postman," "The Trek" trilogy, "Lonely Angel," and "Fooling Around." Currently filming "Blind Eyes" and "Heart's Journey."

Liang Shi clicked in with disbelief, then backed out in shock.

The award system in this world was somewhat different from her original world, but there were basic equivalents.

The Bosca Award was equivalent to the Oscars—the supreme honor for directors worldwide. And Gu Yixue was only twenty-nine years old this year.

When she won the Bosca Best New Director award—she was 21.

The W.T Best Screenwriter award was the world's TOP 1 in terms of prestige. The whole world expressed admiration for this Chinese director.

And she was also the youngest screenwriter in W.T history. The year she won—she was 19.

It had to be said, geniuses really did exist in this world.

The year Quella burst onto the international film scene, it triggered a huge wave of art film productions domestically.

But basically all of them returned in defeat.

Art films were easy to make—small budget, small production, you could make one with just tens of millions, filming mountains, water, and hazy emotions.

But making a good one was too difficult.

Yet the film Quella won the award for happened to be the cream of the crop among art films.

Liang Shi had actually seen it. After watching it at the time, she was filled with emotions and couldn't even figure out where to begin writing her thoughts.

She never would have imagined it was directed by Gu Yixue.

Online, there was no Chinese name for her either, only the transliterated name.

Inside Liang Shi's heart, ten thousand horses galloped past, roaring by.¹

Gu Yixue... just from hearing the name, you could tell she was someone who made art films.

Liang Shi stood there thinking—was it too late to go ask for her contact information now?

In the end, Liang Shi still didn't go ask.

She returned to the "Mo Guang" production's gathering with a slight feeling of regret.

The reason it was only slight regret was because she had missed such an excellent film director.

But the emotion wasn't serious.

Liang Shi knew that good directors, in order to find the actors they wanted, might look through thousands of actor profiles in a single day. Once they found someone they liked, they would check that person's schedule no matter what.

But Gu Yixue had only returned the lighter to her. Even after learning she was an actress, she didn't ask for her contact information, which meant there was no role she wanted her to play.

So there was nothing to regret.

If there was an opportunity in the future, perhaps they could collaborate.

After Liang Shi returned, she continued sitting in the corner. But the director noticed her sitting alone and came over with a wine glass to greet her.

The director, who had drunk a bit too much, kept praising her, saying that on the day Liang Shi auditioned, she had surprised everyone. You couldn't tell at all that she was someone who had just started acting, which meant she was naturally suited for this line of work.

Listening to the director's praise, Liang Shi thought of the information she had just looked up and suddenly felt ashamed of her own inadequacy.

The person truly suited for this line of work was Gu Yixue!

That was someone who was naturally born for this industry.

Liang Shi was just barely scraping by in this field. Suddenly, she felt like her own talent couldn't even be called talent anymore.

But the director still thought her performance was stunning.

Sitting there unable to refuse, she had a few more drinks with the director.

After the director left, Yan Xi suddenly came over: "Is your acting really stunning? How stunning?"

Liang Shi: "...I can only say it's moderately good."

Yan Xi made a dismissive sound, then said with a little pride: "Don't drag me down, okay?"

Liang Shi: "...I'll try. But have you acted before?"

Yan Xi thought for a moment: "Does filming an MV count?"

Liang Shi nodded: "Barely counts."

"Then I've barely acted before." Yan Xi said: "I've had super strong learning abilities since I was little. Otherwise, I wouldn't have gotten into Qingyi University. Just like Senior Sister Xu—if you don't believe me, go ask. There's nothing we can't learn."

Liang Shi: "..."

Liang Shi held a skeptical attitude but very firmly gave her a few perfunctory responses.

Footnotes:

¹ Ten thousand horses galloped past (萬馬奔騰): A Chinese internet slang expression describing a state of extreme shock, disbelief, or mental chaos. The full phrase often implies "ten thousand grass mud horses galloping past," where "grass mud horse" (草泥馬) is a homophonic pun for a vulgar expletive, used to express speechlessness or exasperation.

Chapter 90-3

//

The gathering went on until past eleven, and basically everyone was resting at the hotel. The hotel rooms the director had booked were assigned according to the actors' status—Zhao Ying and Shu Yi's rooms were nicer, while Liang Shi's was just an ordinary room with a queen bed, a private bathroom and a balcony. It was decent enough.

Yan Xi was staying right next door to her.

What surprised Liang Shi was that this little princess Yan Xi didn't throw a fuss about going home. Instead, she stayed at the hotel with everyone else, and she had even sent her wet nurse home, leaving only herself.

Yan Xi had drunk some alcohol, but not much.

When going back, she stood at the door and waved at Liang Shi like a bunny: "Go to bed early, and remember to say goodnight to my gorgeous beauty for me. I love her!"

Liang Shi: "..."

Young people's world nowadays was very straightforward. Liang Shi found it a bit hard to understand.

But Yan Xi's words still made Liang Shi feel a bit uncomfortable.

My gorgeous beauty...

My...

What was that about.

She was clearly... forget it, she belonged to everyone.

After Liang Shi returned to her hotel room, she drank several gulps of water before suppressing that sour feeling in her heart. Then she opened the balcony door to let in some air. When she stood on the balcony looking down at the view outside, she noticed a head poking out from the balcony next door. Yan Xi waved at her again: "Make sure you remember to say goodnight to my gorgeous beauty! That's what I want to say!"

Liang Shi glanced at her: "It's not like you don't have her on WeChat."

Yan Xi fake-cried: "Wuwuwu, I want to be a quiet and well-behaved junior, I can't disturb her."

Liang Shi: "..."

Aish.

She really wanted to hit something.

In the end, Liang Shi closed the balcony door and made a video call to Xu Qingzhu.

She had drunk a bit of alcohol tonight—not to the point of being drunk, but her face was flushed. Her brown long hair was tucked neatly behind her ears, pressed against the headboard. Her back was also leaning against the headboard. Under the light, she looked drowsy, but she still held up her phone to look.

It took a long time for Xu Qingzhu to answer on the other end—so long it was almost about to automatically disconnect.

Liang Shi thought she wasn't going to pick up.

After Xu Qingzhu answered, she fiddled with the camera before switching to the front-facing one. Before she adjusted it, the camera captured the living room—empty and looking devoid of any signs of life. After she adjusted it, the camera showed Xu Qingzhu. She was wearing a pink bunny headband, her skin fair and delicate. The hair by her ears was damp, and there was still a drop of water on the tip of her nose.

Even with the infamous close-up camera angle, it didn't reveal any flaws on her face. Instead, she looked even more pure and innocent.

Her freshly washed face was white with a rosy tint. Her somewhat glamorous features carried a touch of innocence because of the pink bunny headband on her head—her aura was perfectly balanced.

Liang Shi's heart skipped a beat. She instinctively reached out to wipe away that drop of water on her nose.

But she only touched the cold screen.

Suddenly, it was like waking from a dream.

She had grown accustomed to sharing a space with another person. Even if she wasn't living with Xu Qingzhu, she knew that just by pushing open the door, Xu Qingzhu lived right across from her—they were in the same space.

But now, suddenly staying at a hotel, even though the person next door was someone she knew, she still didn't feel a sense of belonging.

Liang Shi smiled, with a hint of bitterness mixed in. The room had only the dim yellow bedside lamp on, casting a dreamy glow over her entire being.

Xu Qingzhu asked: "What are you smiling about? Did you drink?"

Liang Shi nodded: "A little bit."

"Teacher Liang is impressive." Xu Qingzhu clicked her tongue. "Your alcohol tolerance has been improving lately—drinking every day, drinking every night. Without you, the distillery would go bankrupt."

Liang Shi: "?"

Suddenly there were thorns.

Liang Shi still smiled gently: "What's wrong? Did I make you angry again?"

"How could that be?" Xu Qingzhu's tone was flat, her cool voice lilting upward. "Teacher Liang just had a bit to drink. Why would I be angry?"

Liang Shi: "..."

She continued looking at the screen with a faint smile. In her slightly tipsy state, those eyes gazed at Xu Qingzhu through the screen full of tender affection, looking gentle and indulgent.

Her voice after drinking carried a slight hoarseness. She slowed down and called her name: "Xu Qingzhu."

Xu Qingzhu was momentarily stunned, pausing before responding: "Hm?"

Liang Shi's husky voice was lazy and casual: "Talk properly."

Xu Qingzhu: "..."

After a moment, Xu Qingzhu asked helplessly: "How much did you drink?"

"Really not much." Liang Shi shook her head helplessly. "I didn't expect this body to be so bad at drinking. I used to have a really good tolerance."

Xu Qingzhu was speechless: "So where are you now?"

"At a hotel." Liang Shi said: "The director arranged it for everyone. I originally wanted to go home, but the director said it would be best not to, so I didn't."

"Who's at the hotel with you?" Xu Qingzhu asked.

Liang Shi panned her phone around the room: "Just me. Who else could there be?"

Xu Qingzhu: "...Who knows?"

"Teacher Xu." Liang Shi called her name gently with a smile, the corners of her lips curved upward. Those light brown pupils looked infinitely affectionate, but her words carried a hint of provocation: "If you don't believe me, come check for yourself."

"You think I wouldn't dare?" Xu Qingzhu sat on the dark-colored sofa at home, leaning her head back, and suddenly asked: "Tonight you almost embraced a beautiful woman. Who was that?"

Liang Shi suddenly frowned: "Who? I didn't embrace anyone."

Xu Qingzhu sent her the photo. When questioning, her cool voice sounded thin and cold: "And you call this not embracing?"

Liang Shi: "..."

"Oh, that." After seeing Quella, Liang Shi's composure crumbled a bit—it was that kind of regret of realizing a genius had been right beside her but she had missed the opportunity. She sighed.

Then Xu Qingzhu said: "What? Regretting that you didn't pick up the girl?"

"No." Liang Shi explained: "She's a director. She drank too much and almost fell, so I reached out to steady her. I couldn't just let her fall into my arms, could I?"

"Why not?" Xu Qingzhu raised an eyebrow slightly. "She would have just fallen into your arms. Let nature take its course."

Liang Shi: "..."

Was that how "let nature take its course" was supposed to be used?

But...

Liang Shi suddenly asked lightly: "Teacher Xu, are you jealous?"

"How could I be?" Xu Qingzhu propped her arm on the sofa, resting her head on her hand. Her posture sitting on the sofa was lazy and comfortable. She said casually: "A colleague sent me this picture. Teacher Liang, next time you sneak a bite, wipe your mouth clean. Don't let people see."

Liang Shi: "...!!"

"I didn't..." Liang Shi immediately explained: "She's really a director. If you don't believe me, look her up. I just happened to meet her once before, and this time I ran into her again and we just exchanged a few words. There's nothing between us at all—we haven't even added each other on WeChat."

By the end, Liang Shi sounded quite dejected.

"Sounds like you're quite regretful?" Xu Qingzhu asked back.

Liang Shi paused. Her drunk brain hadn't caught up yet, and she nodded: "Mm, very regretful."

After she said that, Xu Qingzhu's expression changed. Liang Shi immediately tried to make up for it: "It's not that kind of regret, it's..."

Before she could finish speaking, Liang Shi suddenly froze.

Because a new notification had popped up at the top of her screen—it was an email.

Her work email had received an email from Gu Yixue. The content was very brief: [Hello, Liang Shi, do you remember me? My WeChat is: ... I have a role here that I'd like you to try out for. If you're willing, add me. Of course, even if you're not willing, you can still add me. I forgot to ask for your contact info tonight, so I used your work email to find you. Gu Yixue.]

Chapter 90-4

Liang Shi was stunned. A few seconds later, she jumped up, visibly excited: "Teacher Xu!!!"

Xu Qingzhu had been getting a bit sleepy, but this outburst startled her awake. She frowned and asked: "What is it?"

"Quella sent me an email asking me to add her on WeChat!" Liang Shi said excitedly: "I might get a chance to act in her production! Oh my god."

The usually composed Liang Shi couldn't contain her emotions at all right now. But Xu Qingzhu raised an eyebrow: "Quella? That director? The one you almost embraced tonight?"

Liang Shi: "..."

Xu Qingzhu's cool voice instantly calmed her down. She nodded at the screen: "Yes."

"How nice." Xu Qingzhu's tone revealed neither joy nor anger. "By the way, Teacher Liang, why did you call me?"

Liang Shi: "..."

She suddenly lay on her side on the bed, half her face buried in the white sheets, looking at Xu Qingzhu on the screen. After a long silence, she said in a muffled voice: "I was afraid you'd forget me."

When she was by her side, she could cook meals, clean the house, and make her presence known in all sorts of ways.

But now that she wasn't home, she needed to stay in contact frequently.

Otherwise, she wouldn't be able to get her luck points.

Of course, she... also really wanted to talk to Xu Qingzhu.

People often say that 21 days can form a habit.

Ever since transmigrating here, Liang Shi had been in the same space as Xu Qingzhu. The two had barely been apart, and they talked every day.

So it had already become a habit.

Not saying goodnight to Xu Qingzhu before bed made her feel like something was missing from her life.

Xu Qingzhu looked at her and chuckled softly: "With so many new flames around Teacher Liang, you can still remember me?"

"There are no new flames." Liang Shi's tone was sincere, but her voice was muffled, carrying an indescribable tenderness and gentleness. "No matter how many people are around me, none of them are you."

The atmosphere suddenly became quiet.

Liang Shi was curled up in the sheets, eyes half-closed, her expression lonely and forlorn.

"Teacher Xu, go to sleep early." Liang Shi's long hair fell down, covering half her face, hiding her loneliness, but her voice couldn't hide it. "Goodnight, have a good..."

Before she could say the word "dream," Xu Qingzhu suddenly took off the pink headband on her head, and her soft hair fell loosely to the sides of her face.

Xu Qingzhu's voice carried a smile but trembled slightly: "Teacher Liang, does your production allow bringing family members?"

Liang Shi: "Hm?"

"The very clingy kind."

//

Liang Shi was half-drunk, but Xu Qingzhu was very sober.

So she drove to the hotel where Liang Shi and the others were staying in the middle of the night. But because the production was staying there tonight and had booked several floors of the hotel, security was very tight.

Xu Qingzhu messaged Yan Xi and asked her to come down to let her in.

Yan Xi stood before her, not showing any of the arrogance from the video at all. She was well-behaved and cute, blinking at Xu Qingzhu and holding out a small notebook: "Senior sister, can you give me your autograph?"

Xu Qingzhu didn't sign blank autographs, so she wrote on the paper:

TO Yan Xi, be happy every day.

Then she added her name in connected strokes.

Yan Xi led Xu Qingzhu to the door of Liang Shi's room and couldn't help but ask: "Senior sister, what's... your relationship with her?"

"We got our marriage certificate." Xu Qingzhu asked back: "What do you think?"

Yan Xi's face fell. The words "she doesn't deserve you" were swallowed back down, and instead became: "That's really nice. I wish you a hundred years of happiness together."

Xu Qingzhu smiled gently: "Thank you."

After that, Yan Xi returned to her room.

Xu Qingzhu raised her hand and knocked on the door. At first, no one answered, so she knocked again.

Just as she was about to call Liang Shi, the door opened.

Liang Shi was holding the door handle with one hand, eyes half-open as she looked toward the doorway, her head leaning against the door. She looked dazed: "Teacher Xu?"

Xu Qingzhu lifted her foot to walk into the room, but the moment she stepped inside, Liang Shi grabbed her wrist. Liang Shi leaned against the door and smiled: "I can see Teacher Xu even in my dreams?"

Xu Qingzhu: "..."

"Weren't you not drunk just now?" Xu Qingzhu asked.

Liang Shi pressed her lips together. The moment her lips parted, the color slowly returned, even more vibrant red than before. She smiled: "I was so happy about adding Quella on WeChat that I drank a little more."

"..."

"Teacher Xu in my dreams is so beautiful too." Liang Shi chuckled softly.

Xu Qingzhu slightly raised her eyes, smiling yet not smiling, leaning her body forward to close in on her: "Then am I more beautiful, or is... Quella more beautiful?"

Liang Shi naturally pulled her into her arms, bending slightly, her arm resting on her waist. She brought her lips close to Xu Qingzhu's ear and gently blew a breath, her voice tender: "No one could be more beautiful than Teacher Xu."

Xu Qingzhu suddenly leaned in, burying her face in Liang Shi's neck, and bit the skin there.

Liang Shi let out a muffled groan and asked in confusion: "What are you doing?"

Xu Qingzhu: "...Planting fruit."¹

Footnotes:

¹ Planting fruit (種水果): A playful euphemism for giving someone a hickey, which is commonly called a "strawberry" (草莓) in Chinese slang due to its red appearance. So "planting fruit" here means leaving a hickey/love bite.
