

Chapter 3 - Examination

When Feng Yue opened her eyes again, she saw Dai Shuangshuang's anxious face and the family doctor Wei Yuran standing beside her, looking completely calm.

"Sister Yue Yue, you're finally awake!" Dai Shuangshuang said, then tugged at Wei Yuran beside her. "Doctor Wei, please check her again?"

Wei Yuran nodded and dutifully stepped forward to examine Feng Yue's condition, then nodded. "Madam, you're fine now. You fainted today because of mild anemia combined with some heat stroke¹. Just rest more and you'll be okay."

Wei Yuran was the family doctor employed by the Yan family, with excellent medical skills.

Since he said there was nothing seriously wrong, Dai Shuangshuang naturally had nothing more to say.

Heaven knows how terrified she was when she saw Feng Yue's pale face as she collapsed to the ground.

Feng Yue nodded. She knew that she had fainted largely because of her illness—the brain cancer that would cause her early death.

After that, Wei Yuran gave some dietary advice, which Feng Yue agreed to one by one. Dai Shuangshuang listened especially carefully.

When seeing Wei Yuran off, Feng Yue said to him: "Doctor Wei, I'll come for a full-body examination the day after tomorrow. Please arrange it."

"Yes, Madam." After saying this, he took his leave.

Standing beside them, Dai Shuangshuang was somewhat worried and asked: "Sister Yue Yue, do you want me to accompany you to the examination the day after tomorrow?"

"I'll go by myself. Doctor Wei will arrange everything properly." Feng Yue didn't want other people to know about this for now.

Dai Shuangshuang thought about it and nodded. She had seen that Doctor Wei several times. Although he was only a few years older than her, he was indeed very reliable in handling matters, so she didn't ask further.

After Feng Yue's heat stroke incident in the conservatory, Dai Shuangshuang temporarily didn't dare let her go there again.

So until dinner time, the two stayed in the media room watching movies.

During this time, Dai Shuangshuang received two phone calls, seemingly from friends inviting her out to play, but she was still worried about Feng Yue's health so she declined.

Feng Yue sat beside her, and after she finished the calls, asked casually: "Friends inviting you to hang out?"

Dai Shuangshuang threw her phone back onto the sofa and nodded casually: "Mm, they said there's a party tonight at a manor on the west side of the city, wanting me to go. They've called me twice already."

Feng Yue understood in her heart—this was probably the place where Dai Shuangshuang had her accident in her previous life.

She had been unable to protect herself at the time, so she only knew the general outline of this incident, not the specific details.

But now that she had forcibly kept Dai Shuangshuang here, she didn't know if she could change Dai Shuangshuang's fate.

Around 4 PM, Aunt Liu arrived at the villa punctually, bringing a pile of fresh ingredients.

These ingredients were all airlifted from various places to the old mansion, and then Aunt Liu selected some to bring to this villa.

As soon as Feng Yue saw the abundant ingredients, her inner chef's soul began to stir.

She asked Dai Shuangshuang what she wanted to eat, thought for a moment, then let Aunt Liu leave first—she wanted to cook personally today.

In Aunt Liu's eyes, she might have only cooked one meal last night, but only Feng Yue herself knew that she hadn't cooked personally for almost a year.

Feng Yue's cooking skills were quite good. When Yan Lin first took over the company, she was too busy every day to have time to eat.

To get her to eat more, Feng Yue tried every method, and her cooking skills gradually improved through this practice.

Yan Lin preferred Cantonese cuisine², so Feng Yue, who loved Sichuan dishes³, forcibly shifted her skills toward Cantonese cooking.

It was probably hereditary—Dai Shuangshuang usually ate more Cantonese food too, so what she ordered tonight was mostly simple home-style Cantonese dishes. She didn't dare make a patient cook complicated dishes.

The dishes Dai Shuangshuang ordered were also Yan Lin's favorites, so naturally Feng Yue cooked them very skillfully.

Seeing Feng Yue methodically handling ingredients and cooking food in the kitchen, Dai Shuangshuang watched for a while, then quietly took out her phone to record a short video. This video then appeared in her chat with Yan Lin.

Dai Shuangshuang: [Sister, look, aren't these all dishes you love to eat!]

This thick tone of a young girl showing off—if her mother knew, she'd scold her for being childish again.

But Dai Shuangshuang seemed to get addicted to filming, constantly holding her phone to record videos of Feng Yue's hands, occasionally asking what this step was for.

Feng Yue answered each question patiently, sometimes chatting with her a bit more.

Until Dai Shuangshuang had filmed to her heart's content, then took her phone and slipped out of the kitchen, sitting in the dining room and fiddling with something unknown.

On the other side of the ocean, with a twelve-hour time difference from home, Yan Lin only saw the video Dai Shuangshuang sent when she returned to her hotel late at night.

She sat back on the sofa to rest while clicking on that ten-second video.

The video showed her familiar kitchen, and the ingredients on the counter were indeed for dishes she usually loved to eat. She could even imagine how these dishes would look when they were all served on the table.

And those occasionally visible slender, fair fingers.

She was getting a bit hungry.

Yan Lin casually replied and exited the chat with Dai Shuangshuang, then got up to contact the hotel front desk to order dinner, then sat back at her desk to continue working.

However, the contact in her phone didn't want to let her off so easily.

Dai Shuangshuang: [Sister, even with the time difference, you're being too perfunctory =A=]

Yan Lin ignored her, glanced at the message, and continued working.

But perhaps Dai Shuangshuang understood her cousin too well, so regardless of whether Yan Lin replied, she roughly described what had happened at home today.

[You don't know how scared I was when Sister Yue Yue fainted in the conservatory today. Fortunately, Doctor Wei later said she just had some heat stroke and nothing else was wrong.]

[Oh, and Sister Yue Yue scheduled a full-body examination for the day after tomorrow. I offered to accompany her, but she doesn't want me to go.]

[Why don't you call and ask Sister Yue Yue?]

After sending this message, Dai Shuangshuang said nothing more. She might be young, but she wasn't so naive that she couldn't see this problem.

Her sister and Sister Yue Yue had definitely had a fight.

And given her sister's personality, she probably hadn't taken the initiative to apologize yet.

Dai Shuangshuang looked at the chat interface where no new messages had come for a long time, and silently sighed.

Her cousin always put work first. Even when choosing their new home, she prioritized whether it was close to the company over whether Feng Yue liked it.

Sometimes she also felt that Yan Lin was being a bit excessive, but seeing Feng Yue seemingly enjoying it, she thought maybe she was overthinking.

Dai Shuangshuang's mind was in chaos. She pulled the blanket over her head.

Time to sleep. Since other people were enjoying themselves, there was no use in her overthinking!

Time quickly arrived at the scheduled examination day. Dai Shuangshuang had stayed with Feng Yue for two days and went home last night.

So on the examination day, Feng Yue got up early to wash and get ready. The family driver was already waiting downstairs.

When she came downstairs with her suitcase, the driver was somewhat surprised to see her carrying luggage: "Madam, you're..."

Feng Yue smiled, then said: "After the examination, please take me home to stay for a few days. Living here alone is quite lonely."

The driver nodded upon hearing this. That made sense—with the young miss frequently away on business, it was indeed quite lonely for the madam to live here alone.

When Feng Yue arrived at the hospital, it was exactly 10 AM. She opened the car door and got out, looking at the familiar hospital in front of her, she unexpectedly became nervous.

In her previous life, this was the hospital where she was confirmed to have late-stage brain cancer.

She still remembered that the sun was really nice that day. She and Mother Yan had originally planned to visit Yan Lin at the company, but just as they got out of the car at the entrance, they saw Yan Lin walking out of the company with a young girl.

That girl was intimately holding Yan Lin's arm.

It was this very scene that completely triggered the disappointment and fear that Feng Yue had suppressed in her heart.

In her agitation, she fainted directly. When she woke up again, she was in this very hospital, with Doctor Wei standing seriously beside her bed holding a diagnosis report.

Feng Yue took a deep breath, then walked briskly toward the hospital.

This hospital was a private hospital solely funded by the Yan Corporation, usually serving Beijing's wealthy people.

Wei Yuran, as the Yan family's private doctor, also held a position at this hospital, so today Feng Yue's examination was under his full responsibility.

The two met in Wei Yuran's office, and then Wei Yuran led Feng Yue to begin their examination today.

After all the various tests, even though each examination didn't require waiting in line, they still spent quite a bit of time.

"Madam, all the examinations are finished. Please go have lunch now. When you come back after lunch, the reports should be ready."

Feng Yue nodded and smiled: "Doctor Wei, thank you for all your trouble today."

"This is what I should do."

Feng Yue bid farewell to Wei Yuran, then left the hospital and found a tea restaurant⁴ nearby to sit down.

Feng Yue randomly ordered some food. Just as she handed the menu to the waiter, her phone popped up with several messages, all from Dai Shuangshuang.

[Sister Yue Yue, two big news items!]

[Which one do you want to hear first!]

Feng Yue smiled helplessly, then replied: [They're both big news, what's the difference? Just tell me one by one.]

[Haha, I forgot.]

[The first news is, remember that party I mentioned the day before yesterday! A girl who attended that party went missing that night, apparently kidnapped!]

Feng Yue looked at this message, feeling somewhat uncomfortable. Because of her intervention, Dai Shuangshuang had avoided this disaster, but another girl had fallen into those kidnappers' hands.

Feng Yue gripped her phone, recalling where the police had finally found Dai Shuangshuang in her previous life.

However, while Feng Yue was lost in thought, Dai Shuangshuang's messages kept coming.

[Okay, there's another thing related to you!]

[When you were cooking that night, I filmed some video footage. After editing, I posted it on my Weibo⁵, and everyone seems to really like you! They're all asking for your account. Sister Yue Yue, can I tag you in the comments?]

Actually, Dai Shuangshuang was being quite modest in her description, because the comments in her Weibo comment section were far from being so polite and restrained.

In that video, Feng Yue appeared very little on screen, barely showing her face—there was only one shot that captured her profile. Most of the footage was of her fair, slender fingers.

But it was just this little bit of screen time, combined with Feng Yue's voice that was like a spring breeze and her skilled cooking techniques, that immediately made some netizens call her "wife" enthusiastically.

So when Feng Yue was tagged by Dai Shuangshuang and saw the comment section full of people dramatically declaring their love, she was completely stunned.

Footnotes:

¹ Heat stroke (中暑) - A condition caused by overheating, common in hot weather or stuffy environments like the glass conservatory described.

² Cantonese cuisine (粤菜) - One of the eight major Chinese culinary traditions, originating from Guangdong province. Known for fresh ingredients, light flavors, and sophisticated cooking techniques.

³ Sichuan dishes (川系菜色) - Cuisine from Sichuan province, famous for its bold flavors, spiciness, and use of Sichuan peppercorns that create a numbing sensation.

⁴ Tea restaurant (茶餐厅) - Hong Kong-style cafés that serve a mix of Chinese and Western food, popular throughout China for casual dining.

⁵ Weibo (微博) - China's equivalent to Twitter, a major social media platform where users post short messages, images, and videos.