

Chapter 32 - Giving Away

Feng Yue turned and left without a word, walking into the residential complex and entering the elevator, as if she was completely indifferent to Yan Lin behind her.

But only she knew that when she saw Yan Lin, she was actually a bit surprised.

She was surprised by Yan Lin's evasive gaze and avoidant behavior when she saw her.

This kind of gaze and behavior would never have appeared on the former decisive Yan Lin.

The former Yan Lin never regretted any of her decisions, so she naturally couldn't have emotions like escape and evasion.

However, Feng Yue was only surprised for a moment. Yan Lin's appearance was like an unpleasant restaurant opening near her home - just ordinary annoyance.

For her, Yan Lin was no longer anything special.

She was just a divorced ex-wife, nothing more.

When Feng Yue returned home, Wenzhen had already helped her clean up the dining room and was now preparing to roll up her sleeves to clean the kitchen.

Seeing this, Feng Yue quickly stopped her. After all, Wenzhen was a guest - there was no reason to let a guest clean the kitchen after dinner.

Wenzhen was forcibly stopped but didn't argue with Feng Yue. She straightened her sleeves and asked, "Has Miss Fu left?"

Feng Yue nodded, remembering the look Fu Sixue had given Wenzhen before leaving - a look that could be called offensive - and said, "Xiaoxue usually has a good personality. She might have been a bit dazed from drinking. Don't take her behavior just now too seriously."

Wenzhen knew what she was referring to and smiled indifferently, "It's fine. I don't need to argue with a drunk person." Although Fu Sixue's gaze had indeed made her uncomfortable, she wasn't the type to be intimidated by a look.

"Good that you don't mind." With that, the two went to the living room to look at the two drunks sleeping soundly. "Shuangshuang's family driver should be here soon. Let's wake them up."

Wenzhen nodded, "Mm, let's go downstairs together later so you don't have to make another trip."

Feng Yue nodded in agreement.

Soon after, Dai Shuangshuang's phone rang. Feng Yue answered the call - it was indeed from Dai Shuangshuang's family driver, who had already arrived downstairs.

After hanging up, the two woke up the two tipsy individuals and helped them out, each supporting one.

This time Feng Yue learned her lesson and put on a hoodie before going out.

After successfully getting Dai Shuangshuang into the driver's car, she said goodbye to Wenzhen and the drowsy Zhou Qiongqiong.

After seeing off her friends, Feng Yue finally exhaled, put her hands in her pockets, and walked slowly home.

It was about eight o'clock in the evening, and most of the residents who had been taking walks in the complex had returned home. Feng Yue walked alone on the small path in the complex, looking up at the star-filled sky.

The Mid-Autumn Festival¹ was approaching, and the moon was gradually becoming fuller.

Feng Yue had spent almost the entire day with friends, and that feeling of being accompanied gave her a satisfaction that made her feel electric tingles throughout her body, even to her fingertips, when she recalled it now.

Friends.

She had friends too.

Feng Yue looked up at the sky with a satisfied smile.

The things she hadn't possessed in her previous life, she had obtained one by one in this life. Fate had been truly kind to her.

Thinking this, even her steps became much lighter.

After returning home, she opened the record player that had been gathering dust and began cleaning the kitchen to the sound of music.

She had a dishwasher at home, so she didn't need to wash dishes by hand. During the time the dishwasher was working, she went to the balcony.

Feng Yue looked at the rose bush standing in the cold wind, trembling in the breeze. The red color at the edges of the petals looked like accidentally spilled blood, and when blown by the wind, it seemed ready to fall.

Feng Yue crouched on the ground watching for a while, then took out her phone and logged into the rose breeding facility's website.

The website's logo was a rose outlined in dark red lines, the same as the logo she had seen on Yan Lin's car.

Feng Yue silently swiped her fingers across the phone screen, as if searching for some information.

Before long, she stopped her movements.

A notification message caught her attention.

"Dear flower enthusiasts, we regret to inform you that the red-pink growth-type new breeding specimen released by our facility some time ago has been purchased and bought out by an anonymous flower enthusiast. We will no longer publish breeding information about it. Please pay attention to other variety breeding information."

Feng Yue crouched on the ground, her gaze moving from the phone screen to the somewhat wilted rose bush in front of her.

If she wasn't mistaken, the one in front of her was probably that "red-pink growth-type new breeding specimen."

And probably, there was only this one in the entire world.

Feng Yue extended her index finger and gently touched the bright red part at the edge of the petals, then sighed.

It would be a pity to throw away this flower, but having it in front of her was an eyesore.

Feng Yue thought about it and decided she needed to find time to deal with this rose bush. At least she couldn't keep it constantly in front of her - it was too annoying.

For now, she would just take good care of it. Perhaps this variety was the only one in the world.

Having made up her mind, Feng Yue moved the rose bush to a corner of the balcony where it would be less exposed to wind and rain but could still easily catch sunlight.

A few days later, Feng Yue finally finished editing her first video. However, despite planning to be a food blogger, the video turned out more like a vlog².

Feng Yue was quite conflicted at first, feeling that her edited video was neither fish nor fowl, completely wasting the filmed footage.

But after Wenzhen helped her review it, Feng Yue felt much better.

Wenzhen told her, "Don't limit yourself to one style. This video, even among current social media content, can definitely be considered above average. Moreover, the housewarming party theme is indeed more suitable for editing into a vlog."

With Wenzhen's reassurance, Feng Yue felt confident. After making minor adjustments to a few details, Feng Yue's first video on her new account was finally published a week after the housewarming party.

Feng Yue's account was newly registered. Besides these few friends following her, the rest were all official platform accounts like assistants.

Feng Yue moved her finger and finally pressed the "send" button. Her busy life of the past few days had finally come to an end. Heaven knows how much trial and error she had gone through editing this video, and how many detours she had taken.

Feng Yue sat on the living room carpet. The new carpet was long-haired, soft and comfortable to sit on. She leaned against the edge of the sofa, threw her head back, closed her eyes, and exhaled.

Video editing was really exhausting.

Feng Yue was extremely tired, so she just leaned against the sofa and fell asleep.

When she woke up again, it was because the video doorbell at the entrance was ringing.

Feng Yue's brain wasn't fully awake yet. The prolonged backward-leaning position made her neck slightly sore, and she could clearly feel the heaviness in her head with the slightest movement.

Supporting the back of her head with one hand, she managed to sit up straight. The doorbell at the entrance was still ringing, meaning someone downstairs was visiting her.

Feng Yue was stunned for two seconds, then suddenly understood.

She quickly got up from the floor, walked to the door, and allowed the person to come upstairs.

It was the same-city express delivery she had booked yesterday. As for what was being delivered...

Feng Yue turned and walked toward the balcony. That rose bush delivered by Dai Shuangshuang shouldn't stay in her home.

She followed a rose growing forum online, and a few days ago she had posted there, roughly saying she had a completely new variety that she was giving away.

After posting, many people quickly sent private messages to Feng Yue. Following her internal criteria, she chose a flower enthusiast from the same city.

The person had a large greenhouse at home with many varieties of flowers, mostly roses.

From the videos and photos the person had taken, all the flowers were well cared for. Feng Yue decided to give that rose bush to them.

After getting the person's address, Feng Yue felt even more at ease.

Lingyun Manor Shawan Villa District No. 12.

This was a famous wealthy district in Yanjing, where the residents were either rich or noble. Feng Yue had been there once, but that was to look at houses.

At that time, she and Yan Lin were preparing to get married, and both sets of parents were planning to prepare a new house for the two children there. But later they abandoned the idea because Lingyun Manor was too far from Yan Group.

So the people living there wouldn't stoop to reselling this rose bush.

Feng Yue carefully packed the rose bush and handed it to the courier who came to pick it up.

Only after the courier's figure disappeared into the elevator did Feng Yue breathe a sigh of relief.

It wasn't that she didn't like this rose bush - she just couldn't let Yan Lin's things stay in her home.

She absolutely wouldn't allow herself to be soft-hearted.

Meanwhile, Yan Lin, the mastermind of all this, knew nothing about it.

As autumn had arrived, their group's annual shareholder meeting was about to begin.

The closer it got to the shareholder meeting, the more decisions Yan Lin needed to make. She had been sleeping less than five hours for several consecutive days.

The prolonged tense mental state made her increasingly taciturn, as if saying one more unnecessary word would make her more exhausted.

Yan Lin rested her head against the car window, closing her eyes to rest.

Today she was going to meet a shareholder to persuade them to support her new strategy at the shareholder meeting. She absolutely couldn't let the failures of her previous life repeat themselves.

In her previous life around this time, it was roughly when Feng Yue was just diagnosed with brain cancer. And she, having just entered the group, was also being constrained by those stubborn old fogeys.

The wrong decisions made due to shareholder obstruction multiplied her workload countless times, and she therefore didn't take Feng Yue's illness seriously enough.

Of course, she wouldn't blame others - she only blamed herself for not doing well enough at the time.

And this second chance was the best opportunity for her to set things right.

Mo Yixu sat in the passenger seat, looking toward the back through the rearview mirror. The dark circles under Yan Lin's eyes were clearly visible.

Seeing Yan Lin resting, Mo Yixu signaled the driver to drive more smoothly.

They didn't need to rush today - perhaps they could let their CEO rest well in the car.

So what should have been a one-hour journey was deliberately extended by Mo Yixu by ten minutes.

It wasn't until the car stopped in the sparsely populated villa district that Yan Lin slowly opened her eyes.

Mo Yixu got out to open the car door for Yan Lin, then heard her say, "Don't do unnecessary things."

Mo Yixu's movement paused. He knew the CEO was referring to his extending the travel time.

"Yes, CEO."

Yan Lin glanced at him, then said lightly, "However, thank you."

Mo Yixu stood frozen in place.

"Let's go."

"Oh, oh, alright!" Mo Yixu followed behind Yan Lin with a normal expression, but his heart was in complete turmoil.

He hadn't heard wrong! Yan Lin! Yan Lin was thanking him!

When had their CEO become so reasonable?!

Mo Yixu swallowed hard, suddenly feeling that his behavior of extending the time was truly heroic! How had he dared!

However...

Mo Yixu looked up at Yan Lin's back walking in front of him.

The CEO must be exhausted lately, otherwise she would have spoken up to stop him when she noticed he was deliberately having the driver extend the time.

Their visit had been announced to the host in advance, so as soon as they appeared, they were directly led into the villa by the butler waiting at the door.

Yan Lin walked ahead without looking around. Having rested in the car for a while, her mind was much clearer.

"Miss Yan, please go directly in. The master is already waiting for you in the study." The butler seemed familiar with Yan Lin and added with a smile, "The master is in a good mood today. What you want to propose should succeed."

"Thank you, Butler Lin." Yan Lin nodded slightly at him, then led Mo Yixu directly into the study.

But the moment she pushed open the study door, Yan Lin ignored everything that appeared before her eyes.

Her gaze fell rigidly and stiffly on the pot of flowers on the study windowsill.

The familiar red-pink gradient - red-pink growth-type new breeding specimen rose.

Footnotes:

1. Mid-Autumn Festival (中秋节) - A traditional Chinese festival celebrating the full moon, usually falling in September or October, when families gather together.
2. Vlog - Short for "video blog," a form of video content that documents someone's life or experiences in a more casual, diary-like format.