

Chapter 34 - Restaurant

The head of Yan Corporation's public relations department had quite strong decision-making skills. When they discovered that the incident was fermenting and growing larger, with the scope of discussion expanding, they decisively submitted a report on the entire matter to the president's office.

Because it involved the president's ex-wife, Mo Yixu completely dared not handle this matter on his own initiative.

He knew how much importance the current President Yan placed on that Miss Feng.

In the conference room, Yan Lin was having a regular meeting with the company's senior management. As usual, she quietly listened to her subordinates' work reports, occasionally speaking up to remind them about problematic areas.

Mo Yixu pushed open the conference room door, then took the report submitted by the public relations department and bent down to quietly brief Yan Lin about this matter.

When Yan Lin heard Feng Yue's name, she immediately raised her hand to interrupt her subordinate's report: "Let's stop here. Continue in ten minutes."

Everyone in the conference room obeyed this cold and taciturn president without question.

Yan Lin stood up and walked straight to her office. Only after returning to her office did she signal Mo Yixu to continue speaking, while she opened that report and began reading it carefully.

Actually, this matter wasn't very serious. It was just that Yan Lin had appeared in Feng Yue's live stream replay, and Wen Zhen had appeared in Feng Yue's newly released vlog, which led netizens to become curious about Feng Yue, this food blogger who had never shown her face.

What exactly was her identity that she could have connections with these important people, and their relationships seemed quite good too.

"Currently, the online comments are mostly curious. Extreme comments haven't appeared yet, but we can't rule out the possibility," Mo Yixu dutifully relayed what the head of public relations had reported to him.

Yan Lin looked at the tablet in her hands, which showed the comment section under Feng Yue's video. Most of the comments were speculation about Feng Yue's identity, with very few people focusing on Feng Yue's actual cooking skills.

Yan Lin knew that Feng Yue wanted to be a food blogger, so she felt somewhat displeased when she saw that these people's focus had completely deviated from Feng Yue's original intention.

After pondering for a moment, Yan Lin said: "Have the public relations department handle all those malicious speculations, and get people to redirect everyone's attention to the video itself. Do it discreetly, don't let people notice."

"Yes, President Yan."

So when the public relations department received such a time-consuming and labor-intensive handling method, everyone was a bit surprised.

They thought it would be enough to just handle the part about President Yan, but they didn't expect to also handle matters involving the former lady and that entertainment company heiress together.

However, people who could work at Yan Corporation were no fools. They knew what to ask and what not to ask.

So when Wen Zhen's people were preparing to handle this matter, they discovered that someone had obviously beaten them to it.

When Wen Zhen received a call from her father's secretary informing her, she had a candidate in mind.

The one who had handled this matter before her must be Yan Lin.

Wen Zhen hung up the phone, holding her phone and standing there quietly, her expression showing an unprecedented thoughtfulness.

She had thought that the divorce between Feng Yue and Yan Lin was something both parties agreed to, but now it seemed that some people were obviously still unable to let go.

Yan Lin's swift action gave her a slight sense of urgency. Although she clearly knew that the current Feng Yue could never give Yan Lin any good looks again.

But she still felt somewhat challenged.

Wen Zhen looked at the box of exquisitely packaged cookies that Feng Yue had baked herself, sitting on the coffee table in her living room, and felt a bit restless.

So, should she be more proactive?

-

The online comments were just a small interlude. With the subsequent intervention of Yan Corporation's public relations department, the comments in Feng Yue's section returned to normal.

And Feng Yue naturally attributed all of this to Wen Zhen's handling.

After this incident, Feng Yue's new account's follower count was gradually rising. Five days after releasing the video, she successfully broke through ten thousand followers.

Wen Zhen was half a photographer for this video, and combined with her romantic feelings toward Feng Yue, when she saw that Feng Yue had broken ten thousand followers, she immediately came to offer congratulations.

Wen Zhen had discovered during the previous housewarming party that Feng Yue liked flowers, so when she came to offer congratulations this time, she specially went to a flower shop to order a bouquet of roses.

But what she didn't expect was that when Feng Yue saw this bouquet of roses, the first expression on her face wasn't happiness and surprise.

It was a trace of annoyance that was difficult for others to detect.

Wen Zhen's expression didn't change, and she still smiled as she handed the bouquet to Feng Yue: "Congratulations, the video's response has been very good."

Feng Yue's displeased emotion only appeared for a second, then she happily took the bouquet: "Thank you, Sister Wen Zhen. You helped me so much with the first video."

"Sister Wen Zhen, please come in and sit." Feng Yue said, then turned around holding the flowers and walked into the house, as if looking for a vase in the storage cabinet.

The moment Feng Yue turned her back to Wen Zhen, a trace of chagrin appeared on her face.

When she had just seen this bouquet of roses, what she thought of was that inappropriate bouquet of roses that had appeared on her and Yan Lin's anniversary.

How rude of her.

Feng Yue found a vase from the storage cabinet, then walked to the living room to sit down.

"Shall I put them in the vase?"

Feng Yue smiled and said: "Yes, putting them in a vase will make them last longer and look better too."

Wen Zhen smiled: "As long as you like them."

Feng Yue curved her eyelashes, beginning to unwrap the bouquet while chatting with Wen Zhen about other things.

She had once fallen in love with roses because of Yan Lin, and now she disliked roses because of Yan Lin too.

She shouldn't be like this. She shouldn't let Yan Lin continue to control her likes and dislikes.

Feng Yue felt a secret guilt toward Wen Zhen, so she decided to cook dinner for Wen Zhen at home, but Wen Zhen refused.

"I came to congratulate you on my own initiative, how could I let you cook?" Wen Zhen looked at the time: "I made a reservation early this morning, and the time is about right now. Let's go."

Hearing this, Feng Yue could only nod, then went back to her room to change clothes.

The restaurant Wen Zhen had reserved was on the top floor of Hengyang Building in the city center, a very famous French restaurant.

The restaurant was located on the top floor of Hengyang Building, the 112th floor. It was the highest restaurant in Beijing¹. Inside, you could get a very good view of Beijing's entire night scene, making it the top choice for couples' dates.

Feng Yue and Yan Lin had been there a few times, but later she had crossed off all French restaurants, including this one, from her list because the dining time was too long.

However, she quite liked overlooking all of Beijing from here, especially at night.

Wen Zhen seemed to be a regular customer of this restaurant. As soon as they entered, they saw the manager leading two waiters toward them.

"Miss Wen, you've arrived. Your reserved table is in front, please follow me." The manager nodded slightly to Wen Zhen.

The two followed the manager to the restaurant's best viewing spot, and after exchanging a few pleasantries with Wen Zhen, he left, leaving two waiters to serve them.

The menu had also been decided by Wen Zhen early on, so the two didn't need to struggle with what to order.

"As expected, this is the place to see Beijing's best night view." Feng Yue turned her head to look at the myriad lights and flowing traffic outside the glass.

Wen Zhen looked at Feng Yue's upturned lips, her expression becoming increasingly gentle. She gathered the hair falling by her face and tucked it behind her ear, smiling: "Yes, I really like this restaurant. Besides the chef's skills, another reason is that you can see the night view from here."

Night view, beauty, delicious food.

Anyone dining in this restaurant couldn't help but cast appreciative glances at these two.

Not to mention Wang Huili, who had just entered with friends.

She saw Feng Yue sitting at the central table almost the moment she walked in, along with the woman with superior features sitting across from Feng Yue.

She harbored hostility toward Feng Yue, a hostility that had existed in her heart since university.

Back then, she had been called the beauty of the Foreign Languages Academy, and almost no one would refuse her overtures.

Except for that aloof beauty from the Finance Academy.

Wang Huili first learned about Yan Lin and Feng Yue from a "beauty contest" spontaneously organized by students on the school forum. She was the winner from the Foreign Languages Academy.

And unusually, the Finance Academy had two evenly matched candidates.

These two were Yan Lin and Feng Yue.

However, the title of Finance Academy beauty ultimately went to Yan Lin, who won over Feng Yue by an extremely small margin.

It was from that time that Yan Lin's cold and proud face frequently appeared before Wang Huili's eyes.

Later, when she learned that Yan Lin liked women, the desire in her heart to surpass Yan Lin began to stir.

She wanted to step on this aloof beauty by becoming Yan Lin's lover.

However, this was her secret thought. Outwardly, she still appeared to have fallen in love with Yan Lin at first sight.

Then came that widely known confession scene, where Yan Lin ruthlessly rejected her and directly moved out of school.

Later, news of Yan Lin and Feng Yue's relationship reached her ears.

Actually, it wasn't certain how much she liked Yan Lin. Her feelings for Yan Lin largely came from her inner unwillingness and embarrassed anger at being rejected.

But she knew deeply that she couldn't win against Yan Lin, so her obsession and unwillingness toward Yan Lin, whom she couldn't obtain, made her develop hostility and jealousy toward Feng Yue, who had won Yan Lin—this innocent person who had defeated her.

This hostility and jealousy had been completely triggered at the last full moon banquet.

And now, Feng Yue, who had clearly divorced Yan Lin, had another woman by her side who was completely on par with Yan Lin.

This inexplicably gave her a sense of defeat.

"Huili? What's wrong? Aren't we going in?" Wang Huili's friend beside her called out.

Wang Huili came back to her senses, then linked arms with her friend and walked into the private room: "Let's go. I'm going to eat well today."

"Since you're paying for it yourself, you can eat as much as you want."

"That's true."

Footnotes:

¹ 燕京 (Yanjing) - An ancient name for Beijing, commonly used in Chinese literature to refer to Beijing/the capital city.

