

Chapter 66 - Reality

Yan Lin observed Feng Yue for two seconds and immediately noticed something was wrong with her emotions. She quickly stepped forward, seeing that Feng Yue was only wearing a knitted cardigan outside, thinking she might be cold.

So she hurriedly took off her own coat, wanting to drape it over Feng Yue.

At this moment, Feng Yue snapped back to her senses and grabbed Yan Lin's wrist to stop her movement.

Yan Lin didn't understand what was wrong with her. "A Yue?"

Feng Yue didn't respond to her, just trembling uncontrollably all over, her eyes fixedly staring at Chu An'an in the distance.

Chu An'an, who was being inexplicably stared at, frowned. She had originally wanted to stare back, but thinking that the lady who had just helped her should be this person's friend, she just pouted and prepared to leave.

Yan Lin was being held tightly by Feng Yue's grip on her wrist. It wasn't that she couldn't break free - she just didn't want to hurt Feng Yue. Feng Yue's current state was clearly not right.

"A Yue, what's wrong with you?" Yan Lin asked gently, completely different from her usual cold and indifferent demeanor.

Feng Yue felt like there was a buzzing sound in her head, unable to hear anything from the outside world.

She stared blankly and slowly looked up to meet Yan Lin's gaze.

Yan Lin could hardly describe what emotion she saw in those eyes - it was like despair and defeat when cornered, lifeless, utterly dead.

She was so frightened that her heart trembled. She quickly broke free from Feng Yue's grip on her hand, draped the coat over her, then clumsily put one arm around Feng Yue's shoulders, as if afraid she would get angry but also afraid something would happen to her.

"A Yue, what's wrong? Are you feeling unwell somewhere? Let me take you to the hospital." Yan Lin was now truly nervous about Feng Yue's physical condition.

Feng Yue's hands hanging at her sides were tightly clenched into fists as she controlled her breathing.

It's okay, it's okay, there must be room for turning things around, there must be other ways.

Feng Yue was breathing rapidly while comforting herself in her heart.

There's nothing to be afraid of. Even if she's destined to die, she's already gained more than half a year. Moreover, she's already died once before. Death isn't scary, it's not scary...

Under her self-suggestion, Feng Yue gradually came to her senses and felt Yan Lin nervously embracing her.

She slowly pushed away Yan Lin's arms, avoiding eye contact. "I'm fine, thank you." As she spoke, she also took off the coat Yan Lin had draped over her.

Yan Lin looked at her pale face and the fine layer of sweat on her forehead, not daring to stimulate her further, and silently withdrew her hands.

"As long as you're okay. Are you going to the restroom? I'll go with you."

Hearing this, Feng Yue turned to look at Yan Lin. There was no emotion in her eyes; she just stared at Yan Lin like this for a while. She didn't understand the meaning of Yan Lin doing these things in front of her.

Since she had already met her true female lead, why was she still bothering with a supporting character who would die upon appearing?

"No need, I can go by myself." Feng Yue lowered her head, refused the offer, then walked toward the restroom.

Her mind was too chaotic. She wanted to clear her head properly.

Feng Yue stayed in the restroom for quite a while before walking to the sink.

She looked at herself in the mirror with light makeup and slowly reached up to touch her thick, shiny black hair.

Since coming to this world, she had been taking good care of herself, strictly following medical advice and absolutely avoiding anything she should avoid. Perhaps because of this, she could still have this beautiful hair.

The image of herself with hair loss from chemotherapy, wearing a hat for long periods, hadn't appeared in her memories for a long time.

Chu An'an's appearance was like a bucket of cold water poured over her head, extinguishing all her fantasies.

Fantasies about living well, having three or five good friends, having a career she loved.

But fantasies were ultimately illusory. Her inevitable death was reality.

However long Feng Yue stood at the sink, Yan Lin waited for her just as long.

Yan Lin was ultimately worried about Feng Yue. Her condition earlier was really wrong, but she didn't know what had caused her distress.

What had she done just now?

Went to the restroom, then washed her hands, helped a stranger, and finally saw Feng Yue.

Throughout this entire process, there shouldn't have been anything that would upset Feng Yue.

Yan Lin couldn't figure it out, so she stopped thinking about it and focused on Feng Yue in front of her.

The cold tap water fell into Feng Yue's palm. The bone-chilling coldness cleared her head considerably. She clenched her fist then released it.

"Don't wash your hands with such cold water." Yan Lin reached out and turned the switch to the hot water side. "You could easily catch cold this way."

Feng Yue didn't allow herself to sink into negative thinking. She exhaled and casually asked, "How come you're here?"

Yan Lin's hand paused, then she explained: "The convention center that Cat Station Video rented is under Yan Corporation. I knew you would be coming, so I came to take a look."

She wasn't lying; everything she said was true. She knew that if she deceived Feng Yue again, there would truly be no possibility between them.

Feng Yue didn't care about this at all. This question seemed to be just asked casually. She nodded, then took a tissue to dry her hands before saying, "Mm, then if there's nothing else, I'll go first."

"Let me walk you there." Yan Lin looked at the busy corridor ahead, afraid that Feng Yue might be bumped into by the bustling staff and get hurt.

Feng Yue neither agreed nor refused. Her mind wasn't on Yan Lin at all right now.

Her head was full of thoughts about how to plan her remaining limited life.

Yan Lin silently followed beside Feng Yue. If she weren't wearing an obviously expensive formal suit, those staff members would probably mistake her for Feng Yue's assistant.

Yan Lin escorted Feng Yue all the way back to their rest room. She stood at the door, inconvenient to enter, and Feng Yue had no intention of inviting her in.

"Then... then I'll go first." Yan Lin's words received no response. She remembered something and called out to Feng Yue again, "A Yue, wait."

Feng Yue turned to look at her.

Yan Lin was obviously somewhat flustered. "After Xiao Xue¹ returns to the country, let's have dinner together. She was supposed to come back yesterday, but for some reason said she needed to delay for two more days, so we..."

"We'll see." Feng Yue interrupted Yan Lin's words and walked into the rest room without looking back.

Yan Lin lowered her eyes, a deathly atmosphere emanating from her, looking quite dejected.

Yan Lin returned to the rest room that Cat Station had prepared for her, where Chang Ya was handling work.

"President Yan, you're back. President Sun from Cat Station Video came by earlier, but since you weren't here, he left again."

"What did he want?" Yan Lin returned to her usual unapproachable demeanor.

Chang Ya said, "It shouldn't be anything important, probably just wanted to greet you."

"Mm." Yan Lin didn't care about these people. What she wanted to know now was what had happened to Feng Yue at the restroom entrance.

After thinking for a moment, Yan Lin instructed Chang Ya: "Go retrieve the surveillance footage from the corridor at the entrance to the restroom in Area D later. The time frame should be from when I went to the restroom until I returned."

Chang Ya was stunned for two seconds before noting this down. Unlike Mo Yixu, she wasn't very good at guessing Yan Lin's thoughts. She found this matter rather pointless, so she asked directly.

"President Yan, did something happen when you went to the restroom?"

"Mm." Yan Lin nodded without concealment. "I encountered an acquaintance."

Chang Ya: ...

An acquaintance encountered in the restroom, and one that required checking surveillance footage. One could only say that rich people's social circles were indeed quite peculiar.

After returning to the rest room, Feng Yue gradually pushed aside the chaotic emotions in her mind. Regardless of whether she was destined to die, she still needed to do what she was supposed to do today.

At 6 PM, Cat Station Video's carnival red carpet began promptly, and many netizens flooded into the live stream.

Feng Yue and Xu Yan were scheduled in the middle, so it wasn't their turn yet. Qian He was curious about what was happening ahead, so she used her phone to watch the live stream with the two of them.

More and more netizens joined the live stream, and the discussion comments became increasingly dense.

Most of those walking ahead were executives from Cat Station Video and such, but Feng Yue hadn't expected to see Yan Lin's figure in the live stream.

"Eh? That's Yan Lin, right?" Qian He said in confusion.

Both Qian He and Xu Yan turned their gazes to Feng Yue, as if wanting to confirm whether it was that person.

Feng Yue nodded, confirming it for them. "It's her."

Yan Lin walked the red carpet together with Cat Station Video's CEO, accompanied by two other executives. Since they weren't internet celebrities or stars, they didn't linger long on the red carpet, just took photos at the backdrop and left.

But what they didn't know was that because of Yan Lin's superior looks, quite a stir had been caused in the live stream.

Looking at the comments that were all praising Yan Lin, Feng Yue felt a strange sense of recognition in her heart.

Right, Yan Lin's face was just that deceptive.

Hadn't she herself been bewitched by that face, deceiving herself for so many years.

Time passed minute by minute, and it was almost time for Feng Yue and Xu Yan to go on stage. Qian He turned off her phone and diligently acted as their little assistant, holding the coats they would wear later.

Feng Yue and Xu Yan walked side by side to the backdrop, where she saw many fans outside the barriers holding light signs - some for Chu An'an, and some for other celebrities she didn't recognize.

She withdrew her gaze and became much quieter.

Ever since Feng Yue had returned from the restroom, Xu Yan had noticed that her emotions weren't right. But since she and Feng Yue weren't that close, she hadn't asked.

It wasn't until they walked down the red carpet and put on the coats Qian He had brought that Xu Yan asked somewhat awkwardly: "Are you okay?"

Feng Yue looked at her with some surprise, then a smile spread across her face. "I'm fine, probably just a bit cold."

"Then Little Yue, wrap yourself up tighter. The wind today is indeed a bit harsh."

Seeing that the two had started chatting about other topics, Xu Yan fell silent. She really disliked Feng Yue's smile just now - it looked worse than crying.

However, she also knew that their relationship hadn't reached the point where she could dig into the other's privacy, so she said nothing more.

1. Xiao Xue (小雪): This refers to Fu Sixue (傅思雪), where "Xiao" is a diminutive prefix used for close friends, making "Xiao Xue" an affectionate nickname.
