

Chapter 69 - Bucket List

Feng Yue sat peacefully in the study, with a white sheet of paper and a pen laid out in front of her.

She was 24 years old, at the prime of her life like a blooming flower.

But unfortunately, she was preparing her bucket list.

Feng Yue carefully calculated that if this lifetime's version of her would die strictly according to the death time from her previous life, then she had at most five months and one day left.

And in these five months and one day, she hoped to do her best to leave no regrets.

She was still very young and still had many things she wanted to do, but unfortunately, she didn't have much time.

Feng Yue sat quietly in the study for a long time. She knew that when she picked up that pen, she would have to start facing death directly.

Her emotions were very calm, and her mind was also very clear. All the chaotic and fearful emotions from last night seemed to have been completely vented.

Feng Yue reached out and steadily picked up the pen, solemnly and seriously writing four characters on that white paper.

【Bucket List】

In Feng Yue's heart, her family came first, so this first wish was also about her parents and family.

【1. Spend as much time as possible with family, take a trip with my parents.】

Feng Yue had this wish even before her death in her previous life. She had spent too much time on Yan Lin before and had never properly traveled with her parents. This time she could fulfill this wish.

As for the rest, Feng Yue couldn't think of anything for the moment.

Feng Yue fell into contemplation again, until a phone ringtone pulled her back to reality.

The call was from Wen Zhen.

"A Yue! Sorry, I... I had some urgent matters here so I couldn't get away yesterday, and didn't make it back in time..." Wen Zhen's voice sounded very anxious and guilty.

Feng Yue smiled slightly and comforted her: "Sister Wen Zhen, it's okay, it's okay. I had several friends come help me yesterday, and everything went smoothly."

"That's good..." Wen Zhen breathed a sigh of relief. "As long as it went smoothly, that's good."

"But Sister Wen Zhen, did something happen on your end? I called you several times yesterday but no one answered. Do you need help?"

Wen Zhen hesitated for a few seconds before stammering: "I'm fine, just had some things that weren't finished. My phone broke yesterday, and I only fixed it today. Sorry for making you worry."

"As long as you're okay."

The two exchanged a few more pleasantries before hanging up.

Feng Yue could sense that Wen Zhen was hiding something from her, but she didn't mind. This was the other person's privacy, and she had no interest in prying into others' private matters.

Feng Yue put her phone aside, then folded the bucket list on the table and tucked it into a book, placing it back on the bookshelf.

This thing absolutely couldn't be seen by her parents. She would choose the most acceptable way for them to let her leave this world.

After doing all this, Feng Yue turned on her computer and logged into her Cat Station Video account.

A few minutes later, Six-Inch Moon's fans saw an announcement about stopping updates.

【Hello everyone, I'm Six-Inch Moon. Due to some personal reasons, this account will begin an indefinite hiatus starting today. Thank you for your companionship and tolerance during this time. We'll meet again if fate allows.】

Feng Yue had quite a few fans, so this announcement naturally caused huge discussion among her followers.

She had just attended the awards ceremony yesterday, and her small business had been thriving yesterday - how could she suddenly stop updating today?

Of course, these were all questions from her fans, which Feng Yue knew nothing about. After posting this announcement, she closed her computer.

Feng Yue stood up and walked to the window. The window was still covered with a layer of fine water droplets.

The winter sunlight fell into the room through these water droplets, warm and dazzling, but Feng Yue still felt that this sunlight couldn't dispel the chill on her body.

So cold. But this was probably the last winter she would be able to experience.

—

Feng Yue drove back to the villa. As soon as she got out of the car, she called for Aunt Zhao to help her with her things.

"Dear, what's all this? Why did you bring so much back home?" Aunt Zhao looked at the two suitcases in the trunk and asked curiously.

Feng Yue struggled to lift down one suitcase, panting heavily: "Some things for my video shooting, and some everyday items."

This explanation went through Aunt Zhao's mind twice before she understood, and she became overjoyed: "You're moving back home, aren't you?"

Feng Yue nodded with a smile: "Yes, temporarily coming back to live for a while."

"That's wonderful, wonderful! We must give you a proper welcome dinner tonight. I'll go make a couple more of your favorite dishes later!"

Aunt Zhao helped Feng Yue move her things back into the house, then went into the kitchen.

Feng Yue had only eaten an egg and drunk a cup of water this morning, and she was quite hungry now. She grabbed an apple from the table and took a bite.

She walked around the house but didn't see her mother, so she went to the kitchen to ask Aunt Zhao curiously: "Aunt Zhao, where's my mom?"

"Madam made plans with Mrs. Zhou to go shopping this morning. She left early."

"Not coming back for lunch?"

"She didn't mention it when she left. I'll call and ask later. If Madam knows you're back, she'll definitely come home for dinner."

"You go ahead with what you're doing. I'll call her."

"Alright."

Feng Yue returned to the living room and used the landline to call her mother.

Indeed, as Aunt Zhao had predicted, when her mother heard her voice on the landline, she immediately stopped shopping and dragged the driver back home.

About half an hour later, Feng Mom's figure appeared at the door.

"Dear, why did you suddenly come back today without calling ahead?" Feng Mom's face was radiant with smiles.

When Feng Yue saw her mother's expression, she felt somewhat heartbroken. Her mother was still so young, but in less than half a year, she would have to experience the grief of losing a child...

Feng Yue looked away. She couldn't think about this anymore. She couldn't have such thoughts.

Since Feng Mom didn't make it to the carnival yesterday, she was very curious and pulled Feng Yue to chat for a long time.

Feng Yue naturally answered whatever was asked. When the timing was about right, Feng Yue tentatively asked: "Mom, are we spending New Year the same way as usual this year?"

Feng Mom nodded: "Yes, your uncle's family will come back on New Year's Eve<sup>1</sup>, we'll go to your grandparents' house on New Year's Day<sup>2</sup>, and your aunts will come to our house on the second day<sup>3</sup>."

This was how they spent every year. Feng Mom was curious why she would suddenly care about this.

Feng Yue suggested: "Why don't we take Grandpa and Grandma to Vancouver this year? Every year it's Uncle's family who comes back. Let's be more proactive this year."

"You want to go to Vancouver?" Feng Mom asked, as if considering Feng Yue's suggestion for a moment.

Feng Yue nodded and continued: "Basically every year it's Uncle's family who comes back. I haven't been to Uncle's house in a long time. And after we spend New Year in Vancouver, we can also travel around several neighboring countries. Our family can have a good trip together before returning home."

Feng Mom wasn't very interested in going to Vancouver, but she was very interested in Feng Yue's idea about traveling afterward.

"That's not impossible. Your dad hasn't had a proper rest in a long time either. Taking this opportunity to go out would be nice, and the company doesn't have any major issues recently." The more Feng Mom thought about it, the more feasible it seemed. "Alright! When your dad comes back, we'll discuss it together, then call your uncle and grandma."

Feng Yue's eyelashes curved with a smile. She knew that when her mother spoke like this, the matter was 90% settled. Her father's opinion wasn't important - Mrs. Jiang just needed to inform him.

After settling this matter with her mother, Feng Yue spent the afternoon in her room diligently working on travel itineraries.

She would try to stretch the entire travel timeline as long as possible. She hoped that the last memories she could leave for her family would be beautiful ones.

—

As soon as Yan Lin's flight landed, she went straight to Dr. Wendell's hospital.

When Dr. Wendell saw this familiar Chinese woman again, he was somewhat surprised.

"Miss Yan?"

"Dr. Wendell, long time no see." Yan Lin looked travel-worn and hardly presentable, but she couldn't care about that now. She got straight to the point: "Dr. Wendell, I came to Germany this time hoping you could return to China with me."

Wendell was very puzzled: "Miss Yan, is there a problem with your wife's physical condition?"

Yan Lin lowered her eyelids, remembering Feng Yue crying loudly in her arms.

She wasn't clear whether the other person's emotional fluctuation was related to her physical condition, but Yan Lin didn't dare gamble. She needed to ensure that Feng Yue's physical condition was absolutely foolproof.

"I'm not clear about my wife's physical condition, which is precisely why I hope you can come back with me."

Such a sudden invitation from Yan Lin naturally couldn't be agreed to by Wendell, especially since he had work and patients here.

The conditions Yan Lin offered were very generous, but this still wasn't enough to move Wendell.

Their first conversation ended on this unpleasant note.

Yan Lin was determined to bring Wendell back this time. If she couldn't do it herself, she would have to seek external help.

When Wendell's matter was first arranged, she had asked her father to make the connection. This time she could only seek her father's help again.

However, what Yan Lin didn't expect was that the person who had helped her father connect with Dr. Wendell wasn't someone else - it was Fu Sixue's father, Fu Zhoujie.

Fu Sixue's family business was involved in the medical field, so when Yan Lin contacted her, she agreed to help without hesitation.

Fu Sixue was at the airport preparing to return to China when she received the call. Learning that Yan Lin was currently in Germany, she immediately changed her ticket on the spot and eventually landed in Berlin a few hours later.

Yan Lin picked her up at the airport and drove Fu Sixue to the hotel.

"Why did you come to Germany alone?"

"It was urgent, so I came by myself."

Fu Sixue asked: "Urgent? Did something happen to Moon? I remember when I called her before I left, she was fine, and her condition was well controlled."

Yan Lin nodded: "That's right. But I'm still worried."

"So just because you're worried, you came alone to someone else's territory to ask them to return to China with you?"

Yan Lin didn't speak, tacitly agreeing.

She wasn't usually such an impulsive person, but Feng Yue's condition at that time was very strange, making her feel that if she didn't do something, Feng Yue might disappear on the spot.

"Forget it, I'm too lazy to lecture you. When it comes to Moon, you find it hard to stay calm. I understand." Fu Sixue paused. "What do you understand? You don't even have someone you like."

Fu Sixue's expression stiffened: "You—" but in the end, she didn't say anything.

This reaction made Yan Lin curious: "What's with that expression? You have a situation."

The second half of Yan Lin's statement was very certain.

Fu Sixue rubbed her nose and changed the subject: "Alright, alright, why worry about my business? Let's talk about Wendell's matter."

Yan Lin looked at her suspiciously for a couple of moments before seriously discussing how to persuade Dr. Wendell with her.

---

Footnotes:

1. New Year's Eve (年三十) - The last day of the lunar year in the Chinese calendar, equivalent to December 31st in Western culture
2. New Year's Day (初一) - The first day of the Chinese New Year according to the lunar calendar
3. The second day (初二) - The second day of Chinese New Year, traditionally when married daughters visit their parents' homes