

Chapter 70 - Transaction

Fu Sixue's arrival made Yan Lin's invitation journey much smoother.

Dr. Wendell had a blonde, blue-eyed female student by his side - the assistant they had met at the hotel last time. This person happened to be Fu Sixue's cousin.

With this connection, Wendell finally agreed to Yan Lin's invitation and would depart for China after handling matters here.

The original plan was to go in half a month, but because Yan Lin was too worried about Feng Yue, she forced the timeline down to five days later.

Having received definite news from her end, a huge weight finally lifted from Yan Lin's heart.

Only then did she set off back to China with Fu Sixue.

The two sat in first class. Yan Lin was resting with her eyes closed, but Fu Sixue was very curious about what was happening between her and Feng Yue.

Fu Sixue had gone abroad shortly after Yan Lin was injured and discharged from the hospital, so she wasn't clear if there had been any progress between the two.

"A Lin, how are things between you and Moon lately? Have you reconciled?"

Yan Lin kept her eyes closed and paused for a long while before speaking: "No."

"No?" Fu Sixue was somewhat surprised. "You nearly lost your life for Moon before. Didn't she soften her heart at all?"

Yan Lin opened her eyes and looked at the bright lights on the cabin ceiling, saying flatly: "She doesn't need to soften her heart. Saving her was my business and has nothing to do with her. I don't want to use this to emotionally blackmail her either."

Moreover, she had only nearly lost her life, but in their previous life, Feng Yue had truly lost hers.

This was nothing compared to that.

After Yan Lin finished speaking, Fu Sixue remained silent for a long time. Yan Lin became curious and turned her head to look at her: "Why aren't you saying anything?"

Fu Sixue, with her hair that had faded to look like pudding, sat there and smiled at Yan Lin, her curled eyelashes blinking: "Nothing, I just feel like A Lin, you seem a bit different."

Yan Lin was puzzled: "Different how?"

Fu Sixue leisurely reclined in her seat, adjusting to a comfortable position: "Hmm... probably that you care about Moon more now."

"I can almost say I grew up with you, and I've watched your interactions with Moon these past few years. Compared to Moon's burning, passionate feelings for you like a blazing fire, you were much more indifferent toward her."

"I know part of it is because of your personality, but I could still sense that you weren't being honest and were rather evasive."

"However, as time went on, you should have developed some feelings for Moon too, but these feelings were unconsciously hidden by you during Moon's long pursuit of you. So neither you nor she could see them."

With that, Fu Sixue let out a long sigh: "But now it's good. You can recognize your own feelings and put Moon first in your heart, considering her more than yourself. That's very good. But it would be even better if Moon could look at you again."

Hearing her words, Yan Lin fell into contemplation. It wasn't that no one had said such things to her before, but she had never been able to listen.

Her formerly self-righteous and superior attitude had not only blinded herself but also blinded Feng Yue.

So now, even if she cut out the heart from her chest and placed it before Feng Yue, Feng Yue would probably only find it bloody rather than touching.

In their previous life, her and Feng Yue's feelings had been unequal. Since fate had given them a chance to start over, what she needed to do was not just make amends, but stake everything in a desperate gamble.

The two landed at Beijing International Airport ten hours later. Yan Lin's people were already waiting outside, but after Fu Sixue made a brief phone call, she said she needed to part ways with Yan Lin.

"Um, I called someone to pick me up. You go ahead first." Fu Sixue buried her head in her phone, still smiling.

Seeing her expression, Yan Lin could roughly guess that the person picking up Fu Sixue should be the one they had mentioned before.

Yan Lin raised an eyebrow but didn't insist, only saying before leaving: "If it's convenient, we can all have dinner together next time."

Fu Sixue was stunned for two seconds upon hearing this, then couldn't help but laugh: "Alright, if there's a chance, I'll definitely let you all have dinner together. But I'll have to wait until I succeed first."

Fu Sixue's last sentence was much quieter, and Yan Lin didn't hear it. After the two said goodbye, Yan Lin left first, while Fu Sixue stood at the entrance enduring the cold wind, waiting for that person to pick her up.

Half an hour later, just as Fu Sixue was considering whether to buy a cup of coffee to warm her hands, a dark purple Porsche stopped in front of her.

The passenger window rolled down, and Wen Zhen's familiar face appeared in Fu Sixue's line of sight.

However, compared to the gentle charm she showed when facing Feng Yue, at this moment Wen Zhen's face showed more suppressed anger and disgust.

Fu Sixue was exceptionally happy to see her, those amber eyes filled with joy and excitement.

"Get in." Wen Zhen said coldly.

No wonder she was in a bad mood - anyone who had just lain at home resting for less than three hours before being called to the airport to pick someone up would look unpleasant.

What's more, she and this person had some friction between them.

"You came!" Fu Sixue excitedly opened the car door and got in at lightning speed, as if afraid the other person would change their mind.

"Where to?" Wen Zhen looked straight ahead, not giving the other person even a glance.

Fu Sixue observed her expression but didn't say much, just curled her lips into a playful smile: "Let's go to Xijing Imperial Residence."

This was an apartment where Fu Sixue regularly stayed when back in the country.

Hearing this, Wen Zhen silently started the car and drove toward the destination.

Fu Sixue and Yan Lin had landed around 10 PM. At this hour, there weren't many cars heading into the city, so there was no traffic.

"Sister Wen Zhen, are you angry with me?" Fu Sixue tilted her head to look at Wen Zhen.

She saw the other person's willow-leaf-like eyebrows furrow slightly.

Seeing this, Fu Sixue's smile only deepened. God, she loved Wen Zhen's eyes and eyebrows to death.

"No, it's just a transaction." Wen Zhen said indifferently.

She knew all too well what someone like Fu Sixue would be interested in. The more fiercely you resisted, the more excited she would become. As long as you treated her calmly, she would find it boring and leave on her own.

Fu Sixue understood what she was thinking and admitted that her approach was indeed correct.

But Wen Zhen's approach only applied to pets she played with casually, not to people she wanted to treat sincerely.

After hearing Wen Zhen's response, Fu Sixue didn't argue, just let out an ambiguous light laugh.

After that, the two didn't say another word. Fu Sixue also turned to look out the car window and didn't look at Wen Zhen again.

Wen Zhen noticed her movements and thought she had figured out the other person's thoughts, not knowing that Fu Sixue had only looked away to hide the intense hunting desire in her eyes.

She was afraid of scaring Wen Zhen.

More than an hour later, the dark purple Porsche stopped at the entrance of Xijing Imperial Residence.

"We're here." Wen Zhen said.

Fu Sixue seemed to have slept in the car and only slowly turned back when she heard Wen Zhen's voice.

"So fast."

"Give me the thing."

"Hm? But our transaction isn't finished yet, is it?" Fu Sixue looked at her, blinking those innocent eyes.

Wen Zhen's expression turned ugly: "You said if I drove you home, you'd return the thing to me afterward. Are you lying to me?"

Fu Sixue braced her hands on the sides of Wen Zhen's seat and leaned over in the cramped sports car, silently getting close to Wen Zhen, her amber eyes seriously gazing into Wen Zhen's eyes.

"I would never lie to you." Fu Sixue said lightly.

Wen Zhen was forced to lean against the car window, her face alternating between red and black: "Isn't this still lying?"

She stretched out her arm to push against Fu Sixue's shoulder: "Move away. If you won't give it to me, then get lost."

"Sister is so fierce." Fu Sixue pouted, then reluctantly rubbed against Wen Zhen's arm before sitting back in her own seat: "I would never lie to sister. I did say that if you drove me home I'd give you the thing, but..."

Fu Sixue's face showed a sly smile: "This isn't my home yet. My home is at Xijing Imperial Residence, Building 4, Unit 1, Apartment 1501."

"You—" Wen Zhen hadn't expected the other person to play word games with her and could only grit her teeth in anger.

Fu Sixue just looked at her innocently.

"Get out quickly!" Wen Zhen was the first to open the car door and got out without looking back.

Fu Sixue was left in the car, a smile appearing in her eyes. The kitty was so cute.

Wen Zhen followed Fu Sixue all the way into the residential complex gate, the unit door, and finally stopped at Fu Sixue's front door.

Wen Zhen looked at the "1501" on the door plate and was about to say something when Fu Sixue spoke first: "Sister, this is just the doorway. It's not inside my home yet."

Wen Zhen had to close her mouth.

Only then did Fu Sixue open the door and lure her inside.

Fu Sixue's place was quite tidy, but it looked very cold and lifeless.

"Sister, please sit for a moment. I'll pour you some water." With that, Fu Sixue walked toward the kitchen.

Wen Zhen wanted to say something but thought better of it. Since she was already here, drinking a glass of water wouldn't hurt.

She sat on the sofa and curiously looked around Fu Sixue's house.

Fu Sixue went to the kitchen to pour her a glass of warm water, then sat beside her.

"Do you think my home isn't very good?" Fu Sixue asked.

Wen Zhen withdrew her gaze. Although she didn't like the other person, she hadn't reached the point where she felt she could freely criticize someone's home.

"No. Give me the thing."

Fu Sixue smiled and got up to take out a small velvet box from her bag.

"Sister, Moon probably won't accept this gift."

Hearing this, Wen Zhen knew the other person had looked at what was inside: "That's none of your business."

"How is it none of my business? I like sister and can't bear to see sister sad after being rejected."

Wen Zhen took the small box from her hands and looked at her coldly: "We were both drunk that night. We're both adults. You wouldn't say something like asking me to take responsibility, would you? So the best choice for both of us is to pretend that night never happened."

Hearing this, Fu Sixue's smile gradually disappeared: "Why can't I say it? What if I insist on making sister take responsibility?"

With that, Fu Sixue grabbed Wen Zhen's wrist and pulled her to lean back on the sofa.

Wen Zhen knew exactly how strong this seemingly delicate woman was, and a trace of panic involuntarily flashed across her face.

"What nonsense are you talking about?! Who should be responsible for whom?" As soon as the words left her mouth, Wen Zhen knew she had said the wrong thing and felt somewhat annoyed.

Fu Sixue was stunned for a moment, her expression softened, and she smiled: "I can take responsibility for sister. As long as sister says so, I'll definitely do it."

"I really like sister. Sister smells so good. Even when I use the same perfume, it doesn't smell like sister's scent." With that, Fu Sixue buried her face in Wen Zhen's chest and inhaled frantically like a pervert.

Wen Zhen's face turned completely red. Taking advantage of Fu Sixue's slightly relaxed movements, she pushed her away and put distance between them: "I'm telling you, we just slept together, that's all. Don't act like you'd die without me. I don't like you, and I won't be with you."

After saying this, Wen Zhen left Fu Sixue's home without looking back, taking her things with her, and slammed the door with a bang.

Wen Zhen fled all the way back to her car before opening the small box she had been clutching tightly in her hand.

Inside was a delicate, beautiful ring with "fy" and a string of numbers engraved on the inner band.

This was the ring she had planned to give Feng Yue as a birthday present. The abbreviation was Feng Yue's name, and the numbers were her birthday.

But now, holding this box, she couldn't bring herself to give this gift away anymore.
