

Chapter 107 - Extra: Wedding (Part 1)

The news of Yan Lin's proposal to Feng Yue quickly spread like it had grown wings, flying straight into the Yan family's group chat.

Dai Shuangshuang, who was there as the only witness because she needed to take care of the little kitten, secretly took many photos of Yan Lin kneeling on one knee and the two of them kissing.

Then she immediately forwarded the photos to the big family group chat.

In the group, those who were at work and those who weren't, those in school and those not in school, were all blown up by the news.

Actually, you couldn't blame them for being shocked. After all, when Yan Lin and Feng Yue got married initially, it was very low-key - they didn't even have a proper wedding ceremony, so naturally the family members never had the chance to give red envelope gifts¹.

The family group chat had an extremely strong reaction, but the person who should have seen this news first, Ms. Jiang Shuyou, didn't see it immediately. It was Dai Shuangshuang's mother who called to tell her.

Then the "Happy Family" small group chat of Yan Lin's family of three exploded, along with Yan Lin's father, Yan Shu.

After all, getting married meant needing wedding leave, and then the two children might also go on their honeymoon. With all this coming and going, Yan Lin wouldn't be able to go to the company to work for the rest of the year.

However, none of this affected the two parties involved at all. Yan Lin accompanied Feng Yue to stroll around the flower field for a while, then prepared to return to the city for dinner.

Originally, when Feng Yue learned that Dai Shuangshuang was also there, she planned to invite her along. But this child Shuangshuang had been sensible since she was young - after handing the cat over to Feng Yue, she immediately found an excuse and ran away without saying a word.

Yan Lin nodded approvingly to herself. This girl's New Year's money² could be increased a bit this year.

Since Feng Yue didn't manage to keep her there, in the end it was still just her and Yan Lin going to the restaurant together.

On the way back, Feng Yue didn't have the leisurely mood to listen to music and feel the breeze anymore, but instead focused on the kitten she was holding in her arms.

"When did it arrive? I had no idea," Feng Yue asked, scratching the kitten's chin.

"Just a few days ago. You had just recovered during those days, and I didn't have time to pick it up, so I asked Shuangshuang to go. After bringing it back, we also took it for a full-body checkup. It's a very healthy little kitten."

"That's good, that's good. Health is the most important thing."

Yan Lin looked at Feng Yue's smiling eyes and said, "Give it a name. When we went to the pet hospital for the checkup and registration, it didn't have a name."

Feng Yue was somewhat surprised. "Eh, you didn't name it?"

"Anna entrusted it to you, so naturally you should be the one to name it."

Anna was the name of the mother cat.

Feng Yue didn't refuse and fell into silent thought.

After a while, she clapped her hands. "I've got it!"

Yan Lin was somewhat curious. "What?"

"Let's call it Coal Ball! It's black and looks cute like a little coal ball!" Feng Yue's eyes sparkled brightly, very satisfied with the name she had chosen.

But after hearing this, Yan Lin first froze for two seconds, then laughed out loud.

Feng Yue felt a bit embarrassed by her laughter, her voice muffled and carrying a coquettish tone. "What's wrong? Doesn't that sound good?"

Yan Lin shook her head with a smile and said, "I feel like it doesn't seem too happy about being called Coal Ball."

Hearing this, Feng Yue looked down at the kitten in her arms. It was working hard to chew on the blue-green jade ring³ on her ring finger.

Feng Yue was startled and rescued the ring from the cat's mouth. "Don't bite this! We won't call you Coal Ball then!"

Then, whether the kitten understood or not, it became interested in the cufflinks on Feng Yue's sleeves instead.

Seeing that it really moved away, Feng Yue also found it quite magical. Yan Lin spoke at the right moment, "How about calling it Ball Ball instead? That's also cute."

Feng Yue thought about it, looked at the little kitten that had no reaction, and nodded in agreement.

After having a name, Feng Yue became even more enthusiastic about playing with Ball Ball.

It wasn't until they were almost at the restaurant that Feng Yue remembered something she hadn't asked about yet.

"Oh right, A-Lin, cough, this proposal ring - why is it made of jade? And I can see there's very obvious engraving inside."

"This was designed and crafted by Xiao Xue⁴ at my request. The jade was from a piece my dad bought at an auction in Myanmar⁵ years ago. After everything was finished, I sent it to Jintai Temple⁶ and asked Master Huiji⁷ to bless it, so unless necessary, please don't casually take the ring off."

Yan Lin paused and said, "When I'm not by your side, it will protect you in my place."

Feng Yue's earlobes turned red. She had thought Yan Lin just casually bought a jade ring, never knowing there were so many things behind it.

"Then, then what about the flower field? Did you prepare that for a long time too?"

Yan Lin nodded, her voice no longer as bright as before but carrying a hint of darkness. "The flower field was prepared for a long time. To be honest, you might find it somewhat inauspicious, but I originally prepared this flower field as our cemetery. But now, this place has become the place of my rebirth."

"When did it start?" Feng Yue's voice was somewhat soft.

Yan Lin carefully recalled, then said lightly, "From when you admitted to me about the bucket list⁸ in Vancouver." That was also when she first contacted a lawyer to make her will.

Yan Lin's voice was very casual, as if she was talking about a very ordinary decision, as if she naturally should have done so, should have gone together with Feng Yue.

She was about to say something more when she felt a warm wetness on her cheek, along with the alluring heat of Feng Yue's breath.

"Don't worry, I've already stamped you. From now on, wherever I go, you have to go too."

Hearing this, the smile in Yan Lin's eyes gradually deepened.

"Alright, it's a promise."

The news of their proposal was passed from the Yan family to the Feng family the next day, and so the wedding of the two was officially put on the agenda by both sets of parents.

This time, they didn't even need to ask the two children much to know that this would definitely be a grand wedding.

So while the two parties involved still didn't have much real sense that they were going to have a wedding, the two mothers, Jiang Si and Jiang Shuyou, had already arranged everything.

From selecting the wedding planner to drafting the guest list, nothing was left out - they almost went to get married for the two children themselves.

With the two mothers constantly giving instructions day and night, Feng Yue and Yan Lin finally began to feel a bit nervous.

Especially when they started discussing wedding dresses, venues, scenes, and bouquet designs with the staff, they experienced the pain of getting married for the first time.

After both sets of parents knew about it, the two moved back to the small villa temporarily. The reason it was called temporary residence was because this wasn't their new house.

Both sets of parents had newly selected a large flat in an excellent location in the city center for the two children. They bought three floors in total, planning to connect them vertically to create a three-story large flat.

Liu Ma⁹ would also move there to take care of them.

The wedding venue was chosen at a manor in Beijing with very strong privacy protection. The manor was large enough to accommodate all the guests they planned to invite.

Actually, their first choice wasn't this manor - it was only changed here after the guest list increased significantly later.

And the person who increased the guest list was none other than Yan Lin herself.

Both families originally thought that given Yan Lin's personality, she would definitely prefer fewer people, but Yan Lin very seriously told the two sets of elders:

"The more guests the better. I'm willing to tell the whole world that A-Yue is my wife."

Sentences like this - Yan Lin's sudden sour and sweet declarations of love - the two sets of parents and Feng Yue had already experienced many times over the past few days, to the point where the parents were almost desensitized.

As for Feng Yue, she would still secretly blush every time she heard it.

The wedding date was set for the first weekend of July. Both families' companies were among the top in the business world, so naturally many people came to attend the wedding.

Everyone rushed from all directions the day before the wedding, just to give their best blessings. The farthest, as far as Feng Yue knew, was the CEO of that Singapore tech company, and the closest were naturally their Beijing locals and even the neighbors who lived in the villa next to the Yan family.

The two newlyweds were separated before the wedding and weren't allowed to see each other, so the two lovebirds could only relieve their lovesickness through video calls.

The day before the wedding, Feng Yue lay on her familiar and soft big bed. The room was somewhat dim, with only the glowing white light from her phone illuminating her face.

Yan Lin's voice was coming from the phone's speaker. She was chattering about something, seeming very worried about Feng Yue.

"A-Yue, the styling team will arrive around five o'clock tomorrow morning. If you don't want to set an alarm, I'll call to remind you. Aunt Zhao will prepare honey water and breakfast for you - you must eat, or you'll feel dizzy."

"I know."

Through the small phone screen, Feng Yue looked at Yan Lin, who was sitting at her desk wearing glasses and writing and drawing with a pen.

For the first time, she felt that she actually missed the other person so much, even though they had just seen each other during the day.

"Oh right, there's also the wedding dress. All the issues you raised before have been fixed, but the stylist definitely doesn't know about them. The dress is quite complicated - remember to have her organize the ties at the back first, or it will be messy and hurt you."

"Okay."

"Also, you..."

Feng Yue interrupted Yan Lin's words. "A-Lin."

Hearing this, Yan Lin looked up toward her phone propped against a water cup. On the screen, Feng Yue's face was nestled red and plump in the pillow, her eyes watery, looking at Yan Lin without blinking.

Yan Lin put down her pen, took off her glasses, picked up the phone with one hand, moved much closer, and lowered her voice somewhat. "What's wrong, baby?"

Feng Yue raised a smile, seeming somewhat shy but mustering the courage to be direct. "I miss you so much."

Yan Lin's hand holding the phone paused. A few seconds later, she stood up with the phone, even her expression becoming nervous.

Feng Yue was confused. "What are you doing?"

Yan Lin blinked and looked at the phone screen, saying, "I miss you very much too, so I'm planning to find a way to avoid my mom and come to you immediately."

As she spoke, she really prepared to go outside.

"Wait, wait, wait!" Feng Yue panicked and quickly called out to stop her.

Yan Lin looked at her.

"Oh my, what are you doing? I was just saying I miss you. I didn't ask you to come see me right now." Feng Yue stuck out her tongue.

If Yan Lin really came to see her, their moms wouldn't let her off easy.

"Alright." Yan Lin obediently sat back down by the bed and explained, "As long as it's something you want to do, no matter what, I will fulfill it for you. If you want to see me, then I would definitely come running."

Feng Yue felt sweet inside, but still teased Yan Lin with her words. "What, are all those cars at home just for decoration? It's not like I won't let you drive."

Yan Lin knew she was joking and didn't argue back, just looked at her with gentle eyes.

The two chatted like little lovers in passionate love, talking about everything under the sun. But as they chatted, Feng Yue's eyelids became heavy.

It wasn't until she fell into a deep sleep that Yan Lin lowered her voice and smiled, saying to the person who was already asleep on the screen:

"Good night, my little bride."

Footnotes:

1. Red envelope gifts (份子钱): In Chinese culture, guests traditionally give money in red envelopes at weddings as gifts to the couple.
2. New Year's money (压岁钱): Money given to children during Chinese New Year, usually by elders in red envelopes.
3. Blue-green jade ring (碧绿幽蓝的戒指): This appears to be Feng Yue's engagement ring that Yan Lin gave her, made of precious jade.
4. Xiao Xue (小雪): Likely refers to Fu Sixue (傅思雪), Yan Lin's close friend who is a jewelry designer.
5. Myanmar (缅甸): A country famous for producing high-quality jade, especially jadeite.
6. Jintai Temple (金台寺): A Buddhist temple where religious blessings are performed.
7. Master Huiji (慧济大师): A Buddhist master/monk who performed the blessing ceremony for the ring.
8. Bucket list (遗愿清单): Refers to a previous part of the story where Feng Yue had a terminal illness and made a list of things she wanted to do before dying.
9. Liu Ma (刘妈): A household helper/housekeeper who has been taking care of the family.