

Chapter 14: Divorce Agreement

Yan Lin's words caused an uproar, and the private room suddenly became extremely noisy.

"You're already married! You two moved so fast! Congratulations, congratulations!"

"Yeah, you quietly became married people!"

"Enough said, we must toast to you two!"

"Why didn't you invite us to the wedding? That's too inconsiderate! Everyone would definitely have given you big red envelopes¹!"

Yan Lin stood up with a slight smile, "Thank you all. We haven't had time to hold a wedding ceremony yet - we just got our marriage certificate."

"That's good, that's good. Don't forget to send us old classmates invitations when the time comes!"

"We won't."

Since Yan Lin had already spoken, it wouldn't look good if Feng Yue didn't stand up and say something, so she had no choice but to pick up her drink and force a smile, "Thank you, we'll send everyone invitations."

As for whether there would actually be invitations, that was up to Feng Yue and Yan Lin to decide. Adults' words can't always be taken at face value.

Fortunately, everyone was just making a fuss, and soon they changed the topic. Only then did the two escape from being the center of attention.

Zhou Qiongqiong leaned over to Feng Yue, "Congratulations, you've finally gotten what you wanted."

As Feng Yue's classmate for six years, even if they weren't very close, Zhou Qiongqiong more or less understood Feng Yue's situation.

Feng Yue clinked glasses with her, "Thank you."

"But..." Zhou Qiongqiong's gaze wandered between the two for a moment, "Did you two have a fight today?"

Feng Yue looked at her with some surprise, "Hm? Why do you say that?"

Zhou Qiongqiong shook her wine glass, "Just guessing. You're very different today from when you used to stick to Yan Lin - you're even avoiding her a bit."

Feng Yue didn't know what to say and could only smile awkwardly.

"Don't misunderstand, I don't mean anything by it. It's just that looking at you two, I feel like I can still believe in love." Zhou Qiongqiong sighed, "I remember you even went to the same university and same major as Yan Lin. Having the courage to follow her like that shows how deep your feelings are. Yan Lin is truly enviable - good looks, good family background, and even such a good partner."

Feng Yue thought to herself: You'd better not believe in love - I'll be divorcing Yan Lin in a few days.

Feng Yue didn't know how to respond to her words, so she changed the subject. The two chatted quite well afterward, and after the reunion ended, Zhou Qiongqiong even gave Feng Yue two performance tickets.

"It's a dance drama I'm performing in. Come watch it with Yan Lin when you have time. I've been devoted to my career these past few years and don't even have friends to chat with. I enjoyed talking with you, so let's get together more often when we have time."

"Sounds good." Feng Yue didn't have many friends either.

Feng Yue looked at the date on the tickets - half a month later. By then, she and Yan Lin should be divorced.

That's what she thought, but she still promised Zhou Qiongqiong she would go to the performance.

Around nine in the evening, everyone had mostly dispersed, and Feng Yue and Yan Lin got into their own driver's car.

Whether because she was happy or not, Yan Lin had drunk quite a bit. She could still control her behavior in front of others, but once back in the car, she leaned drunkenly against Feng Yue's shoulder.

Originally, Feng Yue wanted to avoid her, but there was limited space in the car and nowhere to hide, so she had to let Yan Lin lean on her.

The car was very quiet. Yan Lin seemed to be asleep or not, just closing her eyes tightly, looking docile and harmless.

Feng Yue looked down at Yan Lin, breathing in the mixture of alcohol on Yan Lin's body and the perfume scent - whether it was her own or Yan Lin's, she couldn't tell.

Yan Lin seemed to sense Feng Yue's burning gaze and opened her eyes while leaning in Feng Yue's arms, looking up.

The Feng Yue before her eyes seemed to overlap with the Feng Yue from her previous life. For a moment, Yan Lin couldn't tell where she was.

She only knew she missed her so much.

Yan Lin's eyes were slightly red, with some crystalline traces vaguely in her eye sockets, murmuring, "A-Yue..."

Yan Lin's voice was very soft, as if afraid of disturbing the person in front of her.

Supporting her tired body with both hands, she leaned forward slightly, wanting to be more intimate with Feng Yue.

Just as Yan Lin was about to kiss Feng Yue's lips, Feng Yue quickly turned her head away, making Yan Lin's plan come to nothing.

"Yan Lin, are you awake?" Feng Yue's tone was unprecedentedly calm.

Yan Lin was stunned, then lowered her eyes and slowly sat up straight, "...Sorry."

Only after Yan Lin retreated to her own position did Feng Yue's tightly clenched hands gradually loosen.

Almost, she had almost been bewitched by Yan Lin again. She had almost fallen into the beautiful trap Yan Lin wove for her again.

Looking at the crescent-shaped marks her nails had dug into her palm, Feng Yue secretly made a decision.

To prevent any complications, she couldn't leave herself any way out.

After returning home, Feng Yue silently helped Yan Lin sit on the living room sofa, then went to the kitchen to get the hangover soup² that Aunt Liu had prepared early in the morning.

"Thank you."

"Rest for a bit first. I have something to discuss with you." After speaking, she was about to turn and go upstairs.

Hearing this, Yan Lin blinked and sobered up considerably. Her intuition told her that what Feng Yue was about to say wouldn't be good news. "Can't we talk about it tomorrow?"

"Let's do it today." After speaking, Feng Yue ignored her and went straight upstairs to get something.

Yan Lin sat like a criminal awaiting judgment, drinking hangover soup while carefully reflecting on what she might have done wrong recently.

Looking at Feng Yue's expression, what she wanted to discuss definitely wasn't something trivial.

When Feng Yue came downstairs with something, Yan Lin had already finished the hangover soup and was sitting properly on the sofa, frowning as she waited for judgment.

Feng Yue stood at the foot of the stairs looking at her for a while, inexplicably seeing a trace of pitifulness in her expression.

Had she once waited like this for Yan Lin's judgment?

Feng Yue suppressed the thoughts in her mind, walked to the living room, and placed the documents and a pen in front of Yan Lin.

"Take a look." She said, then sat on the adjacent sofa.

Yan Lin looked at the document sealed tightly in a manila envelope. Something seemed to surface in her heart, but she was unwilling to look.

Yan Lin didn't move, and Feng Yue frowned, seemingly giving her time.

The living room was very quiet - so quiet you could only hear the "tick-tock" of the wall clock.

"Yan Lin." Feng Yue called her name.

What answered her was still Yan Lin's silent resistance.

Feng Yue seemed annoyed by this attitude. She stood up, grabbed the manila envelope from the table, pulled out the documents inside, and placed them clearly in front of Yan Lin.

Feng Yue stood there, looking down at the wife she had pursued for twelve years and been married to for just over a year, with no trace of attachment in her eyes.

"Let's get divorced."

These five words were like pronouncing Yan Lin's death sentence. Yan Lin, who had been silently turning the ring on her finger, finally stopped her movements.

She looked up, her gaze directly meeting Feng Yue's calm eyes, and finally, a ripple appeared on her previously unperturbed face.

"...What did you say?"

Feng Yue said nothing more, just sat back down on the adjacent sofa, quietly waiting for Yan Lin's reaction.

Feng Yue's words tore through the superficial harmony they had maintained, forcing Yan Lin to face reality.

Yan Lin took a deep breath and focused on the divorce agreement.

How could this be? It shouldn't be like this.

She had returned to three years ago, determined not to let Feng Yue repeat her fate. She would definitely make Feng Yue live well, live on and on.

She never wanted to sleep with a night light on the bedside table again.

But where had things gone wrong?

Yan Lin had no answer, so she placed her hopes on the divorce agreement, hoping it would contain the answer to why Feng Yue wanted a divorce.

Yan Lin read the agreement from beginning to end, word by word, until she reached Feng Yue's already signed name at the bottom. Her hands holding the agreement finally began to tremble slightly.

An emotion called anger uncontrollably arose in her heart.

Feng Yue would rather leave with nothing than divorce her.

This fact was laid bare before Yan Lin. The agreement contained no answers she sought - only this simple fact.

Yan Lin wanted to tear this divorce agreement to shreds and burn it to ashes, but her reason told her she couldn't do that.

Feng Yue's illness - she shouldn't get angry or be greatly agitated.

Yan Lin placed the divorce agreement back on the table, then coldly dropped a sentence, "I don't agree." After speaking, she went upstairs without looking back.

Yan Lin fled in panic.

Feng Yue watched her retreating figure expressionlessly. How ridiculous - this was the first time she had seen Yan Lin so flustered.

Feng Yue reached out to remove the ring from her finger, casually stuffed it into her clothing pocket, tidied up the agreement on the table, and then unhurriedly went upstairs to rest.

She knew the divorce wouldn't be that easy, but today she had to bring this matter into the open.

Their marriage had reached its end.

The next morning, Feng Yue sat in the dining room eating breakfast early, while Yan Lin, who was usually strictly disciplined, uncharacteristically got up late.

Mo Yixu was already waiting for Yan Lin in the courtyard. Yan Lin hurried downstairs with her bag, still showing signs of fatigue on her face.

Aunt Liu packed breakfast for Yan Lin and handed it to her. Feng Yue quietly ate her breakfast, not saying a single word to Yan Lin during this time.

Aunt Liu probably sensed the strange atmosphere between them and wisely went into the kitchen.

Yan Lin was about to leave with her breakfast.

"Yan Lin."

Yan Lin's footsteps stopped.

"Think carefully about what I said last night." After speaking, Feng Yue took a sip of the plain water in front of her.

Yan Lin said nothing, but her expression became even uglier than before. Then Mo Yixu's voice came from the door, and only then did she leave without looking back.

Hearing the car engine's roar growing more distant, Feng Yue finally said calmly, "Aunt Liu, please prepare plain water for me from now on."

Footnotes:

¹ Red envelopes (红包): Traditional Chinese monetary gifts given in red envelopes at weddings, New Year celebrations, and other special occasions. The amount depends on the relationship and financial capacity of the giver.

² Hangover soup (醒酒汤): Traditional Chinese herbal soup believed to help alleviate hangover symptoms and restore balance to the body after drinking alcohol.