

Chapter 35 - Inferior

The two had a harmonious meal together, with Wen Zhen deliberately maintaining this atmosphere throughout.

Wen Zhen was, after all, a somewhat older adult, and if she set her mind to earning someone's good impression, it was a very easy thing to accomplish.

Feng Yue also felt very comfortable interacting with Wen Zhen. Wen Zhen would actively bring up topics that both were interested in, and would also quietly listen to Feng Yue's words before giving her own thoughts.

This atmosphere—neither too distant nor too close, but exceptionally harmonious—made Feng Yue feel much more relaxed overall.

The dishes from their menu began to arrive gradually, and after the appetizer came the main course that Wen Zhen had arranged.

"This is a dish I really enjoy eating. If you've been to this restaurant before, you should have tried the chef's version of this dish too, but today's will definitely be somewhat different from what you've had before."

Feng Yue looked at the first main course that had just been served: smoked duck breast with mushroom sauce. She had indeed tried it before, but because she didn't particularly like the texture of the sauce, she had refused to order this dish again after trying it once.

However, due to Wen Zhen's recommendation, she still politely nodded and began to taste it.

The duck breast was smoked just right, with the cross-section showing some pink, clearly indicating it was very tender. Feng Yue took a bite with the mushroom sauce, and just from that one bite, she could tell the difference in the mushroom sauce.

She remembered that when she had come to eat here before, the mushroom sauce definitely didn't have such a smooth texture.

Feng Yue's eyes immediately lit up, and she looked at Wen Zhen with a face full of surprise.

Seeing her expression, Wen Zhen smiled: "It's quite different, isn't it?"

Feng Yue swallowed the food in her mouth and nodded with curved eyebrows: "The mushroom sauce is different from what I had when I came here before!"

"Did they change chefs?" Feng Yue asked. She still remembered that she had once given feedback to this chef, but he had been quite stubborn, with a pure "I understand, but I'll do it again next time" attitude.

However, Feng Yue had understood, so she hadn't ordered this dish again afterward.

"They didn't change anyone," Wen Zhen said. "When others order this dish, it's still made the original way, but when I order this dish, he makes it according to the method I provide."

Feng Yue was somewhat surprised: "But he..."

Wen Zhen smiled and added: "He's very stubborn, right? This chef and I participated in the same culinary competition abroad before, and he lost to me."

Feng Yue's eyes immediately showed admiration: "Sister Wen Zhen, you're amazing!"

"Actually, it was just a civilian competition, and I only beat him that one time. This chef is still very excellent."

Feng Yue nodded knowingly.

The two continued chatting about this topic for quite a while, then Wen Zhen stood up saying she needed to go to the restroom.

Feng Yue felt somewhat bored, so she turned her head to focus on admiring Beijing's night view.

Wang Huili walked out of the private room holding a glass of champagne. After seeing from afar that the woman across from Feng Yue had left, she flexed her right foot, then gracefully walked toward them.

"Miss Feng, what a coincidence." Wang Huili stood behind Feng Yue and spoke.

Feng Yue's train of thought was interrupted by this sudden voice. She turned to look at the person, and after discovering the identity of the newcomer, her brows furrowed almost imperceptibly.

"Miss Wang." Good heavens, the former rival was back again.

"I saw Miss Feng when I first entered this restaurant. After all, you were once my senior, so I should come greet you." With that, Wang Huili raised her glass toward Feng Yue.

Feng Yue silently looked at her for two seconds, then in the spirit of not striking a smiling face, had no choice but to pick up the sparkling water in front of her, stand up, and raise her glass toward Wang Huili: "Miss Wang is thoughtful."

But just then, as the two people standing very close to each other were about to clink glasses, Wang Huili suddenly became unsteady, swaying as if she were about to fall toward Feng Yue.

It looked like the champagne in Wang Huili's hand was about to spill all over Feng Yue's chest.

Suddenly, a hand firmly gripped Wang Huili's wrist holding the glass, steadying her form with absolute supporting force.

However, the champagne in the glass still spilled partially onto Feng Yue's chest due to inertia.

The silk white blouse, saturated with alcohol, clung tightly to Feng Yue's skin.

Yan Lin gripped Wang Huili's wrist with one hand, pulled her back, then took the wine glass from her hand and placed it steadily on the table.

Both turned in surprise to look at this person who had suddenly appeared. Feng Yue didn't even have time to notice that her clothes were soaked and revealing.

Yan Lin shook off Wang Huili's wrist, gave her a cold look, then turned her gaze to Feng Yue.

Following Yan Lin's gaze, Feng Yue looked down at her chest and finally realized she had nearly been exposed. Frightened, she quickly reached up to cover her soaked blouse.

Seeing this, Yan Lin reached out to remove her own trench coat and draped it over Feng Yue.

"Put this on first."

Feng Yue had no other clothing nearby to cover herself, so she could only let Yan Lin do this.

After completing this, Yan Lin turned around to coldly stare at Wang Huili, who had been frozen behind them.

Wang Huili felt unsettled under Yan Lin's gaze and could only force a smile at the corner of her mouth, then said to Feng Yue: "Miss Feng, I'm sorry, I... I didn't do it on purpose."

As she spoke, she slightly turned sideways and extended her right foot forward. Her exquisite, beautiful high heel now had its heel broken in half.

"My shoe suddenly broke, which is why I accidentally fell toward Miss Feng."

Feng Yue completely didn't understand what purpose Wang Huili had in putting on this show. She certainly didn't believe the excuse that her shoe had conveniently broken just then, so she sneered: "Miss Wang's shoe broke at just the right time."

Wang Huili could only laugh dryly twice, then said: "Miss Feng, I'm truly sorry. I will compensate for your losses today. Sorry, sorry."

Hearing this, Yan Lin glanced at her indifferently, then reached out to pick up the champagne glass that was still half full, bringing it to her nose to sniff lightly.

"Inferior."

After saying this, under the shocked gazes of the two, she poured the remaining half of the champagne from the glass down from Wang Huili's chest.

And Wang Huili, under Yan Lin's gaze, didn't dare move, only able to let Yan Lin pour out all the wine from the glass.

Yan Lin was, after all, someone who had long held high positions. Her gaze pinned Wang Huili in place like this.

Wang Huili had only gotten her blouse wet, but she felt as if Yan Lin had slapped her across the face in public.

Feng Yue watched this scene in surprise. She had only seen such an aggressive Yan Lin when she was working.

"Miss Wang's wine suits you very well." Yan Lin placed the wine glass back on the table surface, moving her gaze away from Wang Huili. "I didn't do it on purpose. I will compensate for Miss Wang's losses."

The words Wang Huili had used to brush off Feng Yue were now returned to her unchanged by Yan Lin.

"You—" Wang Huili still didn't dare openly break with this Yan Corporation leader. She could only endure it.

There were quite a few tables of guests sitting in the hall. Although the restaurant did a good job protecting customer privacy, these three were not exactly ordinary faces, and after such a scene, many people watched them like spectators.

When Wen Zhen came out from the back kitchen carrying something, she saw the confrontational scene of the three people. She sharply noticed Feng Yue's unnatural movements as she gripped the front of the trench coat, so she turned to call a waiter to follow her over.

Wen Zhen's arrival seemed to break the standoff between the three: "Oh, Beijing really is small. Miss Yan, long time no see."

Hearing the voice, Yan Lin looked toward her. She had just noticed that Feng Yue should be dining out with a friend, but she hadn't known which friend she was with.

Now, she had her answer.

Wen Zhen stepped forward, then took a clean towel from the waiter's hands and handed it to Feng Yue: "Do you want to go clean up?"

Feng Yue took the towel and said with annoyance: "Thank you." Then she clutched the towel, went around everyone, and followed the waiter to the restroom.

For a moment, only the other three remained at the scene. Wang Huili didn't dare leave because of Yan Lin, while Wen Zhen wanted to figure out what had happened.

Yan Lin didn't pay attention to them, but turned to call over Mo Yixu, who had been standing not far away: "Go downstairs and buy a clean set of clothes to send over."

Although Mo Yixu hadn't heard exactly what the three had said, he had seen his President Yan calmly splash wine on someone. So he didn't dare ask more questions and immediately turned to go to the shopping mall downstairs to buy clothes for Miss Feng.

"Would you two like to sit?" As she spoke, Wen Zhen took a seat first, followed by Yan Lin, who sat across from Wen Zhen, next to Feng Yue's position.

Wang Huili stood in place. Her clothes were dark colored, so even if they got wet, she wouldn't be exposed like Feng Yue. Seeing Yan Lin sit down, she said: "I still have things to do, so I won't sit."

After speaking, she turned to leave, but Yan Lin coldly spoke up: "Wait."

Wen Zhen watched the two with interest.

"Miss Wang, this is my final warning to you." Yan Lin looked steadily at her, her eyes showing no emotion whatsoever. "Don't provoke Feng Yue. If anything happens to her again, I will hold you all accountable."

Wang Huili stood rooted to the spot like prey being stared down by a beast. She knew what Yan Lin meant by "you all."

Not just her, but her family and her family's company as well.

Wang Huili had lost both her dignity and her advantage, and slunk away dejectedly. Thus, only Wen Zhen and Yan Lin remained at this location.

Wen Zhen didn't like using family background to pressure people, but she didn't dislike Yan Lin's behavior just now.

"So Miss Yan is also dining here today?" Wen Zhen asked with a smile.

"Mm." Yan Lin's expression remained unchanged.

"That's quite a coincidence. A Yue and I are also dining here alone."

Yan Lin clenched her fingers. She heard the subtext in the other's words.

A Yue, alone.

Wen Zhen smiled: "So what exactly happened just now?"

"Nothing much."

Wen Zhen's smile stiffened.

This person!

"As long as nothing's wrong." Wen Zhen smiled and picked up the glass in front of her to take a sip of water.

The two had nothing in common to talk about and didn't chat much more.

Before long, Feng Yue finally returned, followed by Mo Yixu with a somewhat unpleasant expression.

Feng Yue stood by the table, her gaze looking down at the seated Yan Lin, saying lightly: "Thank you for your help just now, Miss Yan, and thank you for your clothes." As she spoke, she placed a paper bag on the table.

Yan Lin looked inside and saw, besides the clothes she had draped over Feng Yue, there was also a set of clothes with tags still attached.

Yan Lin looked toward Mo Yixu, who just shook his head at her.

Meanwhile, Feng Yue was still wearing the soaked clothes, with a white bath towel draped over her shoulders, apparently given to her by the restaurant staff.

After saying those words, Feng Yue never looked at Yan Lin again, but turned to Wen Zhen with some apology: "Sister Wen Zhen, let's go back."

Wen Zhen was naturally happy to agree, immediately nodding and standing up.

Feng Yue had already turned and walked out, and Wen Zhen hurried to follow. Then she stopped and turned sideways to say to Yan Lin:

"Miss Yan, enjoy your meal." After speaking, she also left.

Yan Lin watched the two figures leaving, but her fingers gripping the paper bag tightened more and more.