

Chapter 47 - Confession

Wen Zhen harbored some wariness toward Xia Yangting, this suddenly appearing "blind date partner." This also made her somewhat panicked.

Although she understood that Feng Yue couldn't possibly accept anyone at this moment, she still felt that Xia Yangting was a formidable rival.

From what Feng Yue had revealed, it wasn't hard to see that she herself greatly admired Xia Yangting.

Once time passed, this admiring feeling might well turn into adoration, and finally into romantic love.

Wen Zhen didn't want to gamble on this possibility. She wanted Feng Yue to remember her first.

Even if Feng Yue wouldn't accept her confession now, at least she could change her position in Feng Yue's heart.

From friend to pursuer.

Wen Zhen had always been swift in action. Since she had already made this decision, she set the time for executing this decision during this trip.

Wen Zhen didn't plan to tell Zhou Qiongqiong about this. First, she didn't want Feng Yue to feel awkward in front of Zhou Qiongqiong, and second, she was afraid Feng Yue would distance herself from both of them.

After all, if she herself was distanced by Feng Yue, at least Feng Yue would still have Zhou Qiongqiong as a friend.

Meanwhile, Feng Yue was still immersed in the excitement of encountering her friend, completely unaware of Wen Zhen's impending big move.

The time Wen Zhen had secretly set in her heart was the evening of their second day of travel. That evening the resort had a famous activity—a fireworks show—which they would naturally go to see.

The resort wasn't very large, and there weren't many vendors, but after nightfall, the originally empty streets during the day were now lined with many stalls on both sides, presenting the appearance of a small night market.

The things sold at the night market were all inexpensive souvenirs or trinkets. Perhaps due to the atmospheric enhancement, their souvenirs and trinkets sold very well here.

The night lights on both sides of the road also added some charm to this upcoming fireworks show.

The three went out after dinner. Zhou Qiongqiong hung her camera around her chest. Perhaps because they were going to take photos, all three had put on dresses and beautiful makeup tonight.

The fireworks show would start at eight in the evening. They left around seven, still having time to browse the suddenly appeared night market.

Feng Yue was a young lady born and raised in Beijing. Although she had seen this kind of bustling, lively night market online, this was her first time experiencing it personally.

Zhou Qiongqiong wasn't experiencing a night market for the first time, but she naturally loved shopping. Since there were no large shopping malls for her to browse here, browsing the night market was also good.

So these two were like birds let loose, wanting to see everything and buy a bit of everything.

Wen Zhen followed behind them, feeling quite helpless.

The two had been running wild for quite a while before remembering that Wen Zhen was still following behind them.

Feng Yue held a box of stinky tofu in her left hand and a string of candied fruit in the other, smiling apologetically at Wen Zhen: "Sister Wen Zhen, sorry, were we too exaggerated?"

Hearing this, Zhou Qiongqiong also smiled ingratiatingly at Wen Zhen: "Hehe, Senior Sister, we'll try to restrain ourselves a bit."

The night market lights were hazy, warmly scattered on Wen Zhen's head. Her eyelashes cast a faint shadow on her face, and those eyes seemed to contain a pool of spring water as they looked gently at the two, with indescribable charm in their depths.

"It's fine, as long as you're having fun. Seeing you happy makes me happy too."

Zhou Qiongqiong looked at Wen Zhen and stood there in a daze. She knew her senior sister had perfectly inherited her master's appearance, but wasn't her senior sister looking a bit illegally beautiful right now?

Although Zhou Qiongqiong was dazed, her hands didn't hesitate at all. She quickly raised her camera and captured the scene she had just witnessed before Wen Zhen could change her expression.

"Why did you suddenly photograph me?" Wen Zhen didn't understand.

Zhou Qiongqiong didn't speak, just lowered her head to bring up the photo she had just taken. The scene that had appeared before her eyes was perfectly replicated in this photograph.

"Wow, Qiongqiong took such a good photo! Sister Wen Zhen looks so beautiful like this!" Feng Yue leaned over to look and immediately exclaimed in admiration.

Hearing Feng Yue praise her, Wen Zhen's expression became even gentler: "Really beautiful?"

Honest beauty-lover Feng Yue nodded vigorously: "Yes, yes!"

"Then after you finish eating, let's take some photos together." Wen Zhen took out tissue from her bag and wiped the sesame seeds from the corner of Feng Yue's lips.

"Okay!"

The two then discussed where they should go take photos later, leaving only Zhou Qiongqiong still looking at that photograph.

The senior sister in the photo was indeed very beautiful and pretty, but why did she feel something looked strange?

Zhou Qiongqiong pondered for a moment, then had a sudden realization. She knew her senior sister's appearance had given her a sense of déjà vu! This was exactly like a peacock during courtship, frantically showing off its beautiful tail feathers to its beloved!

Zhou Qiongqiong figured out the key point and looked up again at Wen Zhen, who was smiling with bright eyes at Feng Yue ahead.

Good heavens, she could only say good heavens!

Although Zhou Qiongqiong couldn't stop secretly admiring her senior sister, she remained completely composed on the surface, dutifully acting as a conscientious photographer and taking many photos of the two together.

However, the three ultimately hadn't come just to take photos—they had mainly come out to see the fireworks.

Around 7:50, they arrived early at the best viewing spot for the fireworks. However, they were relatively late arrivals. Those crowded in front were professionals who had been squatting there early with their cameras and equipment ready for photography.

The three chose a relatively open spot and sat on the edge of a flower bed waiting for the fireworks show to begin.

The closer it got to the start time, the more people arrived. The three had no choice but to resignedly stand up and were then compactly squeezed together by the crowd.

Among the three, Feng Yue was the smallest in stature, so she became the object of protection for Wen Zhen and Zhou Qiongqiong, tightly sandwiched between them. To prevent the people behind with cameras from bumping into Feng Yue, Wen Zhen even reached out to protectively shield the back of Feng Yue's head.

At eight o'clock sharp, the fireworks in the distance were lit on time. With a loud boom, a bright firework shot into the sky and exploded in the air, also igniting the surrounding fireworks that hadn't yet been lit.

A grand fireworks show began. People standing on the viewing platform all raised their heads to look at the sky, letting out continuous cheers.

The crowd also surged because of this. Zhou Qiongqiong held up her camera taking photos frantically and was temporarily squeezed to one side.

Grand fireworks burst in the sky, the flames' light reflecting in the eyes of everyone looking up at them. But some people always felt that no matter how grand the fireworks, they couldn't compare to the person in front of them being more dazzling.

Wen Zhen didn't raise her head to look at the distant fireworks, but slightly turned to look at Feng Yue beside her, who was being protected by her.

No matter how brilliant and dazzling the fireworks, they couldn't compare to the gentle moon in my arms.

Wen Zhen felt she probably didn't need to deliberately seek the right moment—now was the best moment.

Wen Zhen's hand that was protecting the back of Feng Yue's head slowly moved to in front of Feng Yue's eyes, covering all the light and shadows in her vision.

Then Feng Yue felt a cool fragrance beside her, and Wen Zhen's familiar voice sounded by her ear.

"Ah Yue, I hope you can become my moon. I like you."

With her visual senses deprived, Feng Yue's hearing became incredibly acute. This voice, which could almost be said to resonate in her mind, made it impossible for her to escape by pretending she hadn't heard clearly.

She was like someone who'd been hit with a hammer, blinking as her eyelashes gently swept across the other's palm.

Wen Zhen liked her...

How could Wen Zhen like her?

What should she say now? What did she need to say?

Wen Zhen's words were like fireworks, exploding directly in her brain at this moment.

Feng Yue didn't know how to react, but at this moment, Yan Lin's face appeared in her mind.

That cool and proud face, like the moon rising from a snow-capped mountain peak, so clear and cold.

Moon...

How could she be the moon? She was the one who had once chased the moon.

However, Wen Zhen didn't seem to plan on letting Feng Yue go after just saying that one sentence.

She continued: "You don't need to answer me now. I already know your answer. I just hope my position in your heart can be different from before."

"I don't want to be your friend. I hope I can become a pursuer in your heart."

"I admit, that blind date partner you met at the restaurant yesterday, named Xia Yangting, made me feel threatened. I'm afraid you'll choose someone else."

"So Ah Yue, let me stand on the same starting line as her."

Wen Zhen's voice was very gentle, but her words carried an unwilling strength.

She was serious. This was the only thought in Feng Yue's mind at the moment. But she didn't know how to respond to Wen Zhen's feelings.

This sudden confession completely muddled the water in Feng Yue's heart that belonged to friendship.

The fireworks in the sky were fleeting. Before long, this grand fireworks show was also nearing its end. The crowd dispersed, and Wen Zhen removed the hand that had been blocking Feng Yue's view.

Wen Zhen saw Zhou Qiongqiong squeezing toward them from not far away, then lowered her eyes and looked steadily at Feng Yue's helpless eyes.

"I don't need you to respond to me. I just hope you can put me in a new position in your heart." As she spoke, she smiled and reached out to tuck the hair falling by Feng Yue's cheek behind her ear. "Alright, Qiongqiong is coming. We should go."

Zhou Qiongqiong held her camera and squeezed through the crowd to the two of them, saying breathlessly: "I was squeezed to death. There were too many people. I was squeezed ten thousand miles away¹ in the middle."

She then spread out her camera, looking angry: "Great, now we don't even have a photo with the fireworks."

"It's okay. Without fireworks, we still have these lights here, which look pretty good too. Let's just take one." Wen Zhen stepped back a bit from Feng Yue's side.

"That works too. At least it's a souvenir of being here." Zhou Qiongqiong then looked at Feng Yue, seeing her absent-minded appearance and asking with concern: "Ah Yue, what's wrong? Are you feeling unwell? Were you squeezed just now?"

Feng Yue blinked and came back to her senses, though her expression was still somewhat slow. She shook her head and said softly: "I'm fine."

Zhou Qiongqiong instantly shifted her attention and nodded: "Okay, wait for me a moment." Then she ran off.

Soon, Zhou Qiongqiong brought back a young lady who also had a camera hanging around her chest. Zhou Qiongqiong handed her camera to the other person, then ran over to stand next to Feng Yue.

"Alright, everyone look at the camera. One, two, three, cheese!" With the young lady's words, the first group photo of the three was born.

After thanking the young lady, Zhou Qiongqiong showed the photo to the other two.

In the photo, Wen Zhen and Zhou Qiongqiong were smiling brightly, while Feng Yue, sandwiched between them, stood there with a dazed expression, looking exactly like a pitiful little thing kidnapped by two beautiful women.

"Ah Yue, you're so cute! No way, I'm definitely posting this to my Moments²!"

In the end, Zhou Qiongqiong did indeed use this photo for her Moments post, and this photo also appeared on the desk in the CEO's office of Yan Corporation.
