

Chapter 49: Gift-Giving

About a month had passed since that heart-to-heart conversation in the car. During this month, Wen Zhen had not asked Feng Yue out again, only occasionally chatting with her on WeChat.

Feng Yue didn't know if this meant Wen Zhen was unwilling to be friends with her anymore. Although she felt regretful, all she could do was take care of her own affairs properly.

She would respect any decision Wen Zhen made.

While Feng Yue had hit a wall in her interpersonal relationships, her career was developing smoothly. During this month, Feng Yue had become even more invested in video filming, posting videos much more frequently than before.

As a result, her follower count had grown considerably, already surpassing the 200,000 milestone.

However, she was recently troubled by something. When she had 100,000 followers, she had promised to give her fans a special benefit, but now that she had reached 200,000, she still hadn't figured out what the fan benefit should be.

Looking at the untouched earnings in her account backend, Feng Yue thought for a moment and decided to convert all this money into gifts for a giveaway to her fans. This would count as the 100,000 follower benefit.

As for the 200,000 follower benefit, she hadn't thought of anything yet.

Since becoming a content creator, Feng Yue had never accepted advertisements¹, so her backend earnings weren't very much. After calculating, she even had to add some of her own money, but she didn't mind this kind of thing.

So Feng Yue's giveaway post worth over 100,000 yuan was shared widely by netizens. Whether out of curiosity or wanting to try their luck, many netizens who had never followed Feng Yue before started following her because of this post.

Although her video platform wasn't Weibo², many netizens still specifically went to follow her video account.

This giveaway wave brought Feng Yue quite a few more followers.

Because of this viral post, talent agencies even contacted her, hoping to sign her.

However, Feng Yue paid no attention to these messages. She filmed videos purely to give herself something to do; whether she could make money from it didn't matter to her.

Five days after posting the giveaway, Feng Yue decided to post another Weibo asking everyone about ideas for the 200,000 follower benefit.

This question didn't matter much, but comments about showing her face were pushed to the top of the hot comments.

Feng Yue wasn't against showing her face. After all, she had only avoided showing her face before to make it easier to film close-up material. Since everyone wanted to see her face, she could certainly consider this suggestion.

Everyone who followed Feng Yue saw this Weibo post, and naturally also saw the comment about showing her face.

Wen Zhen was the first to contact Feng Yue.

Actually, her thoughts were different from Feng Yue's. She wasn't deliberately distancing herself because she didn't want to be friends with Feng Yue anymore. She just didn't want to make Feng Yue feel awkward, because after what happened, it wouldn't be Wen Zhen who felt embarrassed, but Feng Yue.

Wen Zhen: [Ah Yue, I saw your Weibo about considering fan benefits?]

Feng Yue quickly replied: [Yeah, I don't have any ideas, so I'm asking everyone what they want.]

Wen Zhen: [Did you see the comment about showing your face?]

Feng Yue: [I saw it. I even considered it. What's wrong?]

Wen Zhen pondered for a moment, then typed her reply: [How about considering doing a mukbang³?]

Feng Yue: [Mukbang?]

[Yeah.]

Wen Zhen roughly explained her idea to Feng Yue - having Feng Yue do a face-revealing mukbang at her restaurant, while also helping Wen Zhen test some new dishes that were about to be launched.

Feng Yue was very satisfied with this suggestion, so she immediately agreed on a specific time with Wen Zhen.

After confirming the time, Feng Yue immediately posted a preview on Weibo. Wen Zhen also reposted this Weibo using her private kitchen's official account.

Netizens who didn't know the truth simply thought this was a collaboration between a content creator and a restaurant for a store visit.

Yan Lin looked at her phone, the screen clearly showing Feng Yue's Weibo homepage. She had even liked every single one of Feng Yue's posts.

However, Yan Lin knew her main account was special and didn't want to bring trouble to Feng Yue again. So she was now using a small account with only Feng Yue in the following list.

She had a deep impression of Wen Zhen's private kitchen, since her divorce papers were signed there.

The relationship between Feng Yue and Wen Zhen seemed better than she had imagined, but for some reason, the two hadn't met since their last trip together.

Maybe they had a conflict during the trip? Yan Lin was pleased with this speculation.

But now it seemed the conflict between them had been resolved.

Yan Lin pursed her lips and turned off her phone in displeasure. Compared to Wen Zhen, that lawyer was obviously much easier to deal with.

Soon it was the day of the livestream. Since it was Feng Yue's first time showing her face to fans in a livestream, she put on light makeup and wore a cream-colored fluffy coat with an apricot-colored undershirt.

Naturally, Feng Yue wasn't the only one who came to Wen Zhen's restaurant that day - Yan Lin and Fu Sixue were also there.

The two sat in the private room next to Feng Yue's, with Yan Lin having opened her phone early and waiting.

"Ah Lin, is this really necessary? It's just a livestream. Do you really need to come here and stake out the place? Wouldn't watching from home be the same?" Fu Sixue ordered a few dishes and then signaled for the server to leave.

"It's different," Yan Lin replied.

"How is it different?"

Yan Lin looked at her. "This is Wen Zhen's restaurant, and Wen Zhen will be here too."

Fu Sixue shrugged. "So what?"

Yan Lin lowered her eyelashes and stopped talking.

Fu Sixue sighed and sprawled boneless across the table. "I'm telling you, after living with Little Moon for so many years, don't you know her personality yet?"

"She's someone who values relationships deeply. She liked you for twelve years - how many twelve-year periods does a person have? This kind of feeling doesn't just disappear easily. It's been less than a year since your divorce, so she couldn't possibly accept anyone else, especially when she's still sick."

"I know." Yan Lin wasn't worried about Feng Yue accepting someone else; she was worried about someone else leading Feng Yue away.

"If you know that, then why are you still..."

"It's starting." Yan Lin interrupted, clicking on the refreshed livestream interface.

Feng Yue's rosy face appeared on Yan Lin's phone screen, her eyes smiling as they looked at the camera.

"Mm, this is too close." Feng Yue probably felt the phone was too close, so she pushed it forward a bit.

"Hello everyone, I'm content creator Six Inch Moon⁴."

Six Inch Moon was Feng Yue's account name for posting videos, taken from her real name - "Six Inch" representing "Feng."

[Wow, the content creator is so beautiful!]

[I'm stunned, guys. So am I really following a food blogger and not a beauty blogger?]

[Ahhhhh sister, I'm into you!]

[My life is saved! As someone who's into looks, voice, and hands, I'm completely satisfied!]

[Beautiful, can cook, and rich - do sisters like this really exist?]

[Rich lady, hungry hungry, feed feed.]

[Person above, don't say "feed feed" - this blogger might actually just feed you [dog head emoji]]

Because of Feng Yue's giveaway post, quite a few people had flooded into the livestream to watch, and the comments were flying by so fast she couldn't keep up.

"Let's chat with everyone first. Our dishes will take a while to come."

[Where is this restaurant? The decor looks pretty nice!]

[Yeah yeah, but it doesn't look cheap.]

"This restaurant is in Yan Jing⁵. It's a Cantonese private kitchen opened by my friend. The taste is really good, everyone can come try it." Feng Yue smiled as she advertised for Wen Zhen.

[Cantonese food, I quite like it. I can try it next time!]

[Hello, complete stranger here. Can I ask about the giveaway time? You're really not a scammer, are you?]

"The giveaway time is the 10th, it was mentioned in that Weibo post. I'm really not a scammer." Feng Yue was somewhat helpless. "Setting it for the 10th is because the next day is Singles' Day⁶, so I can help everyone recover some money. If you don't want the prizes, they can be converted to cash."

After Feng Yue finished speaking, the comments flooded with another wave of "beautiful and kind-hearted" and "rich lady hungry hungry" messages, and some netizens even sent her ten golden roses.

"Thank you Little Fish Blowing Bubbles for the golden roses. But everyone really doesn't need to send me gifts. This livestream is meant to be a fan benefit."

Yan Lin watched Feng Yue chatting happily with everyone on her phone screen, feeling restless. Especially when she heard Feng Yue individually mention the names of netizens who sent gifts, Yan Lin felt even more tempted to act.

Fu Sixue was also eating beside her while occasionally glancing at the livestream. When she heard Feng Yue mention the gift-giving netizen, she immediately felt something was wrong and quickly turned to look at her friend.

Good grief, in just this moment of distraction, Yan Lin had already finished topping up her account.

Fu Sixue watched Yan Lin tap her fingers a few times, then Feng Yue's voice rang out in the quiet private room.

"Thank you user 99899811 for the fifty fireworks." Feng Yue said, "Everyone really doesn't need to keep sending gifts."

One firework cost 100 gold coins, which was 10 yuan in RMB⁷, so fifty would be 500 yuan.

Fu Sixue felt relieved - at least it wasn't too much. But what was with this username 99899811!

"Ah Lin, why don't you change your account name?"

Yan Lin: "..."

She seemed to realize her username was a bit strange too.

"No time."

Now it was Fu Sixue's turn to be speechless. Changing a name would take her five minutes at most, wouldn't it?

Yan Lin stopped paying attention to Fu Sixue and discovered the joy of sending gifts. Every so often she would send Feng Yue fifty fireworks, and every so often Feng Yue would mention this 998 user's name.

After being mentioned four or five times, netizens in the livestream also noticed something was off.

[This 998 big shot must have sent several thousand yuan already, right?]

[Yeah, clicking on the profile shows it's just an ordinary zombie account. Could it be a kid using their parent's card without permission?]

The comments started speculating whether it really was a child. As if responding to these doubting voices, this 998 user sent out 10 carnivals⁸.

One carnival required 131,400 gold coins, meaning this big shot had casually spent nearly 100,000 yuan.

Actually, this amount wasn't much for full-time streamers, but Feng Yue was just a food content creator who made videos - completely different from those streamers who lived in their broadcast rooms.

Sending out ten carnivals was equivalent to directly compensating for the losses from Feng Yue's giveaway post.

The livestream also exploded because of these ten carnivals.

Footnotes:

¹ gg (广告) - Abbreviation for "guanggao," meaning advertisements or commercials

² Weibo (微博) - China's Twitter-like social media platform

³ Mukbang (吃播) - A broadcast where someone eats food while interacting with their audience, originating from Korean culture but popular worldwide

⁴ Six Inch Moon (六寸月) - The character "封" (Feng) in her name can be measured as "six inches" in traditional Chinese measurement

⁵ Yan Jing (燕京) - An ancient name for Beijing, still used in literature and formal contexts

⁶ Singles' Day (双十一) - November 11th, China's biggest online shopping festival

⁷ RMB (人民币) - Renminbi, Chinese yuan currency

⁸ Carnivals - Expensive virtual gifts on Chinese livestreaming platforms, equivalent to very large monetary donations