

Chapter 90 - Rescue

Around 4 AM local time, the snow finally diminished significantly. Under Jiang Zhao's strong insistence, the ski resort's search and rescue team and the rescue team he had contacted finally set out.

Of course, Feng Yue and Yan Lin, still trapped in the storage cabin, didn't know about this yet.

The two sat quietly against the wall. Neither had fallen asleep nor was talking.

Yan Lin's brain was dizzy with fever, but she wasn't sleepy at all. What Feng Yue had said really disturbed her peace of mind.

And Feng Yue, sitting beside her, was equally confused in her mind. Yan Lin's life after her death was something she had never understood before. The things she spoke of weren't even mentioned in that book.

In Feng Yue's understanding, Yan Lin's feelings for her were more like a habitual comfort, but Yan Lin told her it wasn't as simple as habit.

No one would feel pain and heartache when breaking a habit, nor would anyone willingly give up their life after changing a habit.

What kind of feelings did Yan Lin really have for her?

Feng Yue didn't dare think further. She was afraid she would develop inappropriate expectations only to be cruelly pushed into the abyss again.

Feng Yue exhaled and silently comforted herself.

It was okay. Even if Yan Lin's feelings were truly different now, saying these things wouldn't help. After all, she only had a little over three months left to live. Yan Lin's feelings were no longer the most important thing to her.

She still had her own wishes to fulfill, relatives who needed her company. Her world didn't consist of only Yan Lin.

"Cough, cough."

A bout of coughing interrupted Feng Yue's thoughts. She turned to look at Yan Lin, who was covering her chest and coughing violently, and handed her the bottle of water that had mostly melted.

Yan Lin didn't notice her movement—she was coughing her soul out.

Feng Yue had no choice but to reach out with one hand to help her breathe while using the other to try to feed her some water.

Yan Lin drank some water from Feng Yue's hand to moisten her throat. However, the water was ice-cold, and since she was still running a fever, Feng Yue didn't dare let her drink too much.

After drinking water, Yan Lin finally stopped coughing, and the storage cabin returned to silence.

Yan Lin listened to the obviously diminished wind and snow outside, guessing in her heart that the snow would probably stop soon, and they would be rescued before long.

"A Yue." Yan Lin's voice was unusually hoarse, suddenly ringing out in this small room, startling Feng Yue.

"Mm."

Yan Lin looked up at the pitch-black ceiling and murmured, "If we just died here like this... would you feel regret?"

Feng Yue paused her movements, then turned to stare at Yan Lin with burning eyes, saying decisively, "Yes!"

"I shouldn't die here, and neither should you."

Feng Yue frowned tightly, puzzled about why Yan Lin would ask such a question. Then she saw Yan Lin's pale face force a smile.

Feng Yue's expression became stern, and she quickly moved closer to Yan Lin. "Are you injured somewhere? Are you bleeding?!"

As she spoke, Feng Yue's hands began to tremble. She couldn't bear to imagine what she should do if Yan Lin was bleeding somewhere.

There were no medicines Yan Lin needed here. If she was injured and had a bleeding wound, given their current situation, Yan Lin would surely die.

Yan Lin withdrew her gaze, looked at the anxious Feng Yue, and shook her head with a smile. "I'm not—"

Before Yan Lin could finish speaking, the storage cabin door was suddenly pushed open with force.

Flying wind and snow rushed in through the doorway. Before the two could react, the figures of Jiang Zhao and Jiang Ming appeared at the entrance.

Feng Yue and Yan Lin, after being out of contact for nine hours, were finally successfully rescued.

The search and rescue team brought not only rescue equipment but also some basic medical supplies.

Feng Yue's leg injury and Yan Lin's high fever received simple treatment. Then, the two were taken together by the search and rescue team to the clinic in the resort village, waiting to be transferred to the city hospital after dawn.

After being rescued, Yan Lin and Feng Yue were separated and never spoke another word.

After being rescued, Feng Yue finally let go of all her worries and concerns, lying on the hospital bed and falling into a deep sleep.

However, before falling asleep, she still instructed the hospital doctor about Yan Lin's hemophilia¹ condition.

As for Yan Lin, she had completely collapsed and fainted the moment the search and rescue team lifted her onto the stretcher.

Vancouver city center, San Pedro Hospital.

Around 5 PM, Feng Yue opened her eyes in the regular ward. The pungent smell of disinfectant made her cough twice. Feng Hehai, who was watching over her in the ward, quickly moved to the bedside.

"Nuanuan², you're awake. Is there anywhere else that feels uncomfortable?" Feng Hehai brushed away the hair from her forehead, his heart and eyes full of distress.

Apart from the injury on her leg, Feng Yue was fine elsewhere. She had just woken up after extreme exhaustion.

"Dad, I'm fine." Feng Yue took the water cup her father handed her and drank a sip of warm water.

As the warm water went down, it seemed to finally dispel the lingering cold in her heart.

"How is Yan Lin?" Feng Yue asked.

Feng Hehai shook his head. "She hasn't woken up yet, but your mother is watching over her. Don't worry."

"Drink some porridge. Your grandmother made it. The two elderly folks were really frightened by you two youngsters."

Feng Yue drank porridge while silently listening to her father's chatter.

After drinking porridge and taking medicine, Feng Yue finally spoke: "Dad, I want to go see Yan Lin."

Feng Hehai was startled and looked at Feng Yue's leg disapprovingly. "You're still injured. How can you think about running around?"

Feng Yue grabbed her father's arm and acted coquettishly: "Daddy, my leg injury isn't that serious. Just go borrow a wheelchair. Besides, Yan Lin got a fever because she dragged me such a long way to save me. I want to see how she is."

Feng Hehai couldn't resist his daughter's coquettishness and had to compromise helplessly. After borrowing a wheelchair, he lifted Feng Yue onto it.

While pushing Feng Yue, he also said, "You and A Lin really have an unbreakable bond³."

Feng Yue said nothing, just looked straight ahead.

Yan Lin's ward wasn't far from Feng Yue's. The father and daughter didn't walk long before arriving.

The ward door was open, and some voices could be heard inside. When Feng Hehai pushed Feng Yue in, they discovered that a doctor was giving Yan Lin a routine checkup, with Jiang Shu accompanying her nearby.

Jiang Shu noticed the father and daughter entering and quickly came over to check on Feng Yue. "How are you, Nuanuan? Is there anywhere else that feels uncomfortable?"

Feng Yue smiled reassuringly. "Mom, I'm fine."

She then looked toward the several doctors gathered around the bed. "How is Yan Lin's condition?"

Jiang Shu sighed and frowned. "A Lin's high fever requires medication injections to reduce it, but because she has hemophilia, every medication injection takes a long time to process, and if bleeding occurs, she needs clotting factor injections. So a simple fever becomes very complicated."

"Moreover, A Lin hasn't regained consciousness since being rescued. If she doesn't wake up today, we'll have to contact her parents."

Having stayed by Yan Lin's side for so long, Feng Yue naturally knew her specific physical condition.

"I'll contact them when the time comes. She became like this because she saved me." Feng Yue looked at Yan Lin lying pale on the hospital bed and said calmly.

Feng Yue stayed in Yan Lin's ward for a while before being called back to her own ward by a nurse. Although her leg injury wasn't serious, she still needed to receive IV treatment.

Yan Lin regained consciousness around 9 PM. When she woke up, her fever had broken. She just felt somewhat thirsty and her throat hurt.

Only Feng Yue was in the ward, sitting listlessly on the sofa looking at her phone.

When Yan Lin made a soft sound, she looked toward her.

"Yan Lin, you're awake?" After saying this, she quickly called out loudly to Jiang Shu: "Mom! Mom, come in quickly, Yan Lin seems to be awake!"

Jiang Shu walked in from outside the ward, hurried to Yan Lin's side, and handed her a cup of water.

"A Lin, drink some water first."

Yan Lin bit the straw and gulped down a large mouthful of water, then blinked and looked around at everything.

"Aunt..." As soon as Yan Lin spoke, her hoarse voice frightened both Feng Yue and her mother.

Jiang Shu patted her shoulder. "A Lin, don't talk for now. Auntie will go call the doctor."

Jiang Shu then left, but before leaving, she helped Feng Yue into the wheelchair and told her to watch Yan Lin's condition.

Feng Yue wheeled herself to the bedside and looked at the conscious Yan Lin, a smile curving her lips. "It's good that you're awake."

Yan Lin lay on the hospital bed, tilting her head to look at her. When she saw Feng Yue in the wheelchair, her brow furrowed tightly. "A Yue... your leg..."

"I'm fine. The wheelchair is just for convenience in getting here from my ward."

Hearing this, Yan Lin relaxed her brow and sighed in relief.

Then she thought of something and asked in a hoarse voice, "Did you contact my parents?"

Feng Yue shook her head. "I haven't had time to call yet. If you hadn't woken up today, I would have contacted them. Should I call now?"

Yan Lin closed her eyes. "No. Don't contact them. Don't let them know about this."

Feng Yue didn't understand, but since it was Yan Lin's business, she didn't feel it was appropriate to say anything.

Soon they heard the doctor's footsteps, and Feng Yue voluntarily stepped aside.

Yan Lin quietly accepted the doctor's examination.

Yan Lin thought silently that it was fortunate A Yue hadn't had time to contact her parents.

She didn't want her parents to know about this not only because she didn't want them to worry and rush over, but also because she didn't want her parents to blame saving Feng Yue for her hospitalization.

She didn't want Feng Yue to bear even the slightest bit of resentment or blame.

After the doctor finished the examination, Yan Lin asked for her phone and contacted her father, Yan Shu⁴.

[Dad, regarding my vacation, I need to extend it to mid-May. I can't explain the specific reasons.]

After doing all this, Yan Lin tucked her phone back under her pillow.

Since A Yue had already prepared herself to face death willingly in three months, she absolutely couldn't let her spend those three months alone.

1. Hemophilia - A genetic disorder that impairs the body's ability to make blood clots, making any bleeding potentially dangerous
2. Nuanuan (囡囡) - An affectionate term meaning "little girl" or "sweetheart," used by parents for their daughters
3. "Unbreakable bond" (斩不断的缘分) - A Chinese idiom referring to a deep, fated connection that cannot be severed
4. Yan Shu (严澍) - Yan Lin's father's name
